

By EILEEN SHANAHAN (c) N.Y. Times News Service WASHINGTON—Two hundred and sixty economists from universities across the nation urged Congress yesterday to act promptly to raise taxes.

The economists, who said they feared "a new round of inflation" if there was no tax increase, added their voices to those of a large number of business executives and labor leaders who have endorsed a tax increase.

The economists, however, unlike the businessmen, did not necessarily advocate an accompanying reduction in federal expenditures.

The economists, most of whom are liberals, said it was "highly unlikely" that sufficiently large budget cuts could be made to avert the need for a tax increase.

In addition, they said, "many of us feel that, even if they were possible, such cuts would be poor—indeed, dangerous—social policy in the light of the conditions of millions of our citizens living in the ghettos of our cities."

The statement made clear that the economists "do not necessarily agree on the exact amount or timing of the tax increase."

They did not suggest any specific amount or date, but urged "early enactment of tax legislation along the general lines proposed by the President."

President Johnson has asked for a 10 per cent tax surcharge on all corporations and all individuals except those in the lowest income brackets. He proposed a July 1, 1967 effective date for the corporate increase and an Oct. 1 date for individuals.

The economists' statement, sent to the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance committees, was the work of three well-known economists, who prepared and circulated it among their colleagues for signature.

They were Walter W. Heller of the University of Minnesota, a former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers; George L. Bach of Stanford University and Joseph A. Pechman, director of economic studies of the Brookings Institution.

The economists noted that their "support for a tax increase does not imply support of all federal policies, foreign and domestic."

The group emphasized their belief that "the economic case for a tax increase does not rest on the fear of a large (government budget) deficit as such . . . rather, the case is based on the fact that rapidly rising federal expenditures are moving steadily upward and that the interplay of these increases threatens renewed inflation."

They said they also favored a tax increase "to help avoid the degree of credit tightness experienced a year ago."

The House Ways and Means Committee is to resume tomorrow its hearings on the President's tax proposals.

WEATHER Mostly sunny, little change in temperature. High today around 65. Chance of frost in valley sections tonight.

Lynda Bird To Marry Marine

BY ROY REED (c) N.Y. Times News Service SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — President and Mrs. Johnson announced yesterday that their eldest daughter, Lynda Bird, would marry Capt. Charles S. Robb in December.

Robb, 28, of Milwaukee, gave Miss Johnson, 23, an engagement ring last night at the Johnson ranch near here.

The White House said the wedding would be held in the White House early in December. The date has not been set.

Robb is a Marine. He is adjutant at the Marine barracks at Washington. In addition, he serves as a social aide at the White House.

He and Miss Johnson have been seeing each other frequently for the last several months. They have spent several weekends recently at Rehoboth Beach, Del.

GOV. GEORGE ROMNEY

Detroit 1st Stop on Romney's 19-Day Tour of Urban Slums

BY ROBERT B. SEMPLE JR. (c) N.Y. Times News Service WASHINGTON — Gov. George Romney will turn his unannounced campaign for the Republican presidential nomination towards domestic issues today as he begins a 19-day tour of urban slums in the United States.

Fresh from a brief but highly controversial excursion into foreign policy—during which he charged that he had been "brainwashed" by the Johnson Administration on Vietnam—into the Michigan governor will visit 17 cities in 12 states for a "first-hand" study of slum conditions.

Romney's first stop will be Detroit, the largest city in his home state, where 43 persons died during a week of violence looting and shooting in July.

Although billed by the governor himself as a "non-political" trip, it comes at a time when Romney's political image—in the opinion of many analysts—badly needs refurbishing.

His "brainwashing" charge, first made in an interview Monday and repeated Saturday at a news conference here, caused resentment among Democrats and provoked criticism among some Republicans, including Henry Bellmon, former Oklahoma governor who is Richard M. Nixon's campaign manager.

In an editorial published yesterday morning his state's largest newspaper, the Detroit News, urged him to quit the race. And he has problems of a local nature as well, including a state-wide teachers' strike and an auto worker's walkout at the Ford Motor Company.

Meanwhile, in what could be an even more ominous development, there was fresh evidence that Republican moderates may be seeking alternatives to Romney in the Republican presidential race.

Shortly after noon yesterday, former Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania, an early Romney backer, flew to New York to meet with retired Gen. James M. Gavin, reportedly to discuss the situation in the Republican party and the possibility of a Gavin candidacy.

The two are scheduled to meet at 7:30 this morning. At his home in Massachusetts yesterday General Gavin, an outspoken critic of increasing U.S. military involvement in Viet Nam, confirmed the meeting—which was scheduled before the Romney "brainwashing" episode—but declared bluntly: "I am not a candidate."

"I lived in Pennsylvania for some time," he added, "and Governor Scranton and I are good friends. We are going to discuss the situation in general, but with nothing specific in mind."

However, he said he would not be "surprised if we got into domestic problems."

"I am very anxious for the Republican party to come up with a moderate candidate who can take a position that can lead to an early resolution of the Vietnam involvement. In that regard I will do whatever I can."

Asked whether he would become a candidate if Republican leaders decided he would make a good one, he replied: "I would have to look at it very hard, but we're not at that point now."

Surveyor 5 Lands on Moon; Sends Photos

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Surveyor 5 survived a close-call touchdown only two miles from its target on the moon yesterday and began televising close-ups of a potential astronaut landing site.

The gentle impact at 5:46 p.m. (PDT) came after 48 hours of long distance struggle to close a leaky pressure valve designed to force fuel to three descent-braking rockets.

"Everything looks normal, and we are delighted," said a spokesman at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, where the craft was controlled by radio during its quarter-million-mile voyage.

Despite the leak, the rockets functioned perfectly and the 600-pound craft dropped at a speed of seven miles an hour on a 10-degree slope in the Sea of Tranquility, a dry plain on the right half of the lunar disc. The first pictures showed the craft's legs, which appeared to

Riot Police Breakup Crowd With Tear Gas

By KEN HARTNETT MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP)— Riot-equipped police fired round after round of tear gas last night to break up a milling throng of white South Side residents who were threatening to follow the largest civil rights march in city history back to its base in the Inner Core.

The tear gas began to fall when officers, attempting to seize a man exhorting a crowd of about 1,000 at the intersection of 16th and Lincoln streets, deep in the area where some 160,000 Polish-Americans live, came under a rain of stones and bottles.

Four persons were arrested. The crowd began chanting, "Let's march to the North Side" and "Get Groppi," a reference to Father James E. Groppi, the white Roman Catholic priest who, along with Negro comedian Dick Gregory, has been leading the marches, now in their 14th consecutive night.

The speaker police were after, a gray-haired crew-cut man in an orange checkered shirt, was injured. Officers said he was struck by a brick.

The crowd, which apparently had gathered along the route used by some 2,500 demonstrators, mostly Negro, who chanted their way across the long 16th Street viaduct earlier in the day, to await the marchers' return.

But the marchers had returned unscathed by another route to the Inner Core. Marchers, their ranks swelled by persons responding to a multi-state appeal for support, set out after a rally.

The marchers took a wide swing through the section in a four-hour march that was marred only by two scuffles and a brief flurry of tossed bottles outside a veteran's hospital in suburban West Milwaukee.

On the return trip one Negro youth was arrested after a store front window shattered while the demonstrators streamed past.

A handful of hecklers pursued the demonstration line which extended for about three quarters of a mile.

Large delegations of marchers said they were from Flint, Mich., Gary, Ind., Chicago and other cities.

It was the second consecutive night in which the marchers advanced into the virtually all-white South Side, where an estimated 160,000 Polish-Americans reside.

The marches are sponsored by the Milwaukee Youth Council of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which Father Groppi advises.

March leaders yesterday had no immediate formal reply to Mayor Henry Maier's new proposal for a housing ordinance at the metropolitan level. But his plan, he said, would not work without the formal backing of most suburbs.

Area Mother Of 6 Children Kills Husband

MAYVILLE, N.Y.—A 35-year-old Mayville mother of six children is in county jail today accused of the Sunday morning murder of her husband, Mabel Jean Beltron of the Mayville-Sherman rd., was charged by Chautauque County District Attorney Robert W. Sullivan with the murder of her husband John W. Beltron.

According to sheriff's deputies, Mrs. Beltron called the sheriff's department at 5:20 a.m. yesterday to tell them she had shot her husband. When they arrived at the scene deputies found Beltron lying dead on the floor with a shotgun blast in the head. No details were released on the circumstances leading up to the fatal shooting, but coroner Ralph Wallace of Westfield has ordered an autopsy.

Public defender George Rogers, Mrs. Beltron's attorney, demanded a preliminary hearing when she appeared before town of Chautauque police justice Edwin G. Seaton. Justice Seaton set the preliminary hearing for Friday Sept. 15 at 10 a.m.

The six Beltron children range in age from seven to 15 years.

Teachers Turn Down Contract

NEW YORK (AP) — Public school teachers rejected overwhelmingly yesterday a $125-million pay package and the city immediately obtained a temporary court order to bar mass teacher resignations when the new school term begins today.

The teachers turned down the contract by a vote of 12,333 to 2,523.

The Board of Education said, however, that the 900 public schools would open as scheduled for the city's 1.1 million pupils, with parents and volunteers in charge, if necessary.

The court order, issued in State Supreme Court by Justice Samuel M. Gold, barred the teachers' union from holding "any strike, concerted

De Gaulle Urges Poland To Follow French Lead

BY JONATHAN RANDAL

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
GDANSK, Poland — President de Gaulle yesterday stepped up his campaign to persuade his Polish Communist hosts to assert themselves more in dealings with the Soviet Union.

"France hopes that you will look a little further and see things in broader perspective than you have been obliged to until now," he said in a lunch toast at this Baltic Sea resort. Evident in the general's statement since he arrived in Poland for an official visit last Wednesday has been the suggestion that Poland should cast off the defensive concept that sees Soviet aid as necessary for protection against Germany.

"You will certainly overcome obstacles which now seem insurmountable," the 76-year-old de Gaulle told the luncheon audience yesterday, which included Premier Jozef Cyrankiewicz and Defense Minister Marian Spychalski. The gradual verbal escalation of de Gaulle's remarks began the first night of the visit when he repeated his theory of a world endangered by the presence of two superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union.

That night the general spoke for the first time of the "west center and east," of Europe. The phrase was widely interpreted as defining a political as well as geographical difference between the Soviet Union and the European Communist countries which used to be referred to as Soviet satellites at the height of the cold war.

In a meeting the next day with Edward Ochab, the Polish chief of state, the French leader praised Poland as a "powerful respectable" reality and urged it to move "into the first ranks."

In his address to the Jagellonian University at Cracow on Friday, he warned against the danger of "the enormous foreign machine," an allusion which was widely interpreted as meaning the Soviet Union.

Yesterday morning, the French leader told a crowd in the old town of Gdansk, which between the two world wars was the free city of Danzig, that "the new Poland has a new vocation."

"Like France Poland's vocation is broad and goes far. It cannot confine itself to old, purely continental concepts," he said.

Addressing himself to Poland's fear of West Germany, he said in the luncheon toast that "you should have wider horizons now that your misfortunes and frontier difficulties have been overcome by your victory, which is also ours."

Throughout the three-day tour of the Polish provinces which ended last night when he flew back to Warsaw, the general has been stressing the Polishness of the land which was temporarily awarded Poland in 1945 in return for the loss of territory to the Soviet Union in the east.

be undamaged. The pictures were of excellent quality and showed that the skeletal legs and landing pads were apparently in good shape. The surface of the moon around the landing pads resembled typical earlier photos of moon-cape-like fresh-plowed ground pitted with small craters.

The terrain was littered by small rocks. "These are surprisingly clear pictures," a spokesman said.

The photographs were sharp and bright, with considerable contrast. As the craft touched down, flight controllers at the laboratory let out a lusty cheer. It had carried its camera package and a soil testing device to a perfect soft landing.

Surveyor 5 sprang a leak Friday night about 18 hours after it was launched from Cape Kennedy, Fla. Engineers blamed a faulty valve.

For the next 48 hours, they tested the landing rockets intermittently, exhausting much of their fuel. Enough remained, however, for the three leg rockets to take over and keep the craft stable after burnout of the craft's main braking rocket. Despite the technical difficulties, a spokesman estimated Surveyor 5 landed within about 20 miles of its aiming point.

Gen. Thieu Still Seeking Peace Talks With No. Vietnam

BY PETER GROSE

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — South Vietnam's president-elect Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, refused yesterday to accept as final North Viet Nam's reported rejection of peace talks with his new Saigon government.

He will still try to establish official contact with Hanoi early next month, Gen. Thieu said, and if the North Vietnamese ask for a goodwill gesture, he will offer a one-week suspension of the United States bombings.

"I am not too confident that Hanoi will accept any talks at this time," Gen. Thieu said in a television interview, but "the time factor is important. If at this time Hanoi rejects a meeting proposal, they could accept at any time."

Interviewed separately, two U.S. policymakers echoed similar beliefs that the room for diplomatic maneuvering is not exhausted.

They indicated that the Johnson Administration is clearly banking on the hope that an effective government can emerge in Saigon over the months to come, and thereby induce Hanoi to soften its longstanding refusal to enter into negotiations.

The U.S. ambassador to Saigon, Ellsworth Bunker, went so far as to say that negotiations toward a cease-fire were a definite possibility before the U.S. presidential elections in November, 1968.

Secretary of State Rusk said he regretted the "harshness of the statements" of the North Vietnamese leaders. "Among other things," Rusk said, "statements on the public record make it more difficult for the prime minister in Hanoi to take another view in private discussions."

The official Communist newspaper of North Vietnam, Nhan Dan, mocked Gen. Thieu's offer of a bombing pause when he first announced it last Aug. 11. "The voice of that clique, who are selling out their country, has no value," Nhan Dan said.

Attitudes such as these Ambassador Bunker characterized as a "negative factor." But, he went on, "I don't say that this is necessarily something that is conclusive, that will always be the attitude of Hanoi."

Bunker cited two factors for his optimism that negotiations could get under way before November 1968.

One is "a realization on the part of Hanoi that there is permanence here, there is stability, there is a functioning constitutional government, and a realization of the futility, therefore, of going on indefinitely with the fighting."

"Another thing is the psychological effect of the elections here, which indicate to all the Vietnamese people, including the Viet Cong, that there is now a government to which they can adhere, under which their rights can be protected under the constitution, and under which they can become integrated into the social and political structure of the country."

Heavy Fighting Reported Below Demilitarized Zone

(c) N.Y. Times News Service

SAIGON — Heavy fighting broke out late yesterday between U.S. Marines and North Vietnamese regulars two miles south of the Marine outpost at Con Thien, just below the demilitarized zone.

A Marine spokesman in Danang said Marines of the 26th Regiment were locked in battle with a North Vietnamese force of about 600 men.

The hillside outpost of Con Thien has been under almost daily artillery and mortar fire from North Vietnamese positions within and to the north of the demilitarized zone.

Forty Marines were wounded Friday when Con Thien was hit with 20 rounds of rocket fire. In four battles Thursday near the demilitarized zone, 20 Marines were killed and 114 wounded.

In the central highlands, two tanks defending an Army artillery position near Pleiku probably saved the artillerymen from being massacred yesterday morning when they came under Viet Cong attack, a military spokesman said.

The tanks were moved in during the night and the Viet Cong probably didn't know they were there," the spokesman said.

"The V.C. usually plan an attack well in advance and it so happened they came through the wire just where the tanks were located."

The tanks cut down the attackers with machineguns. As a result, 10 Viet Cong who broke through the artillery battery's perimeter were killed and the rest, estimated at a company of about 115 men, were scattered, the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, American pilots again hit major targets around Hanoi while being harassed by MIG fighter planes.

Three MIG 17's were reported destroyed on the ground during a coordinated attack on the Kep Airbase, 37 miles northeast of Hanoi, by U.S. fighter bombers from three Thailand-based wings.

MIGs appeared four times but fought just once.

In South Vietnam's central highlands, Army Sgt. Maj. Jack C. Honeycutt, of Longmont, Colo., told from a hospital bed yesterday how he was rescued and led to safety by two Montagnard tribesmen after the observation helicopter in which he was flying had crashed in the jungle.

DETROIT — Negotiators for the Ford Motor Company and the United Automobile Workers union will meet today for their first session since the union struck Ford at midnight last Wednesday.

The meeting will begin at 2 p.m. at Ford's headquarters building in Dearborn, outside Detroit. It will not mark a formal resumption of bargaining; its purpose will be to set up a possible schedule of negotiations.

Walter P. Reuther, the union leader, is not expected to attend. Instead, Ken Bannon, who heads the union's Ford department, and Nelson Samp, his assistant, will probably meet with Malcolm L. Denise, Ford's chief negotiator and Sidney McKenna, his assistant.

"We will try and come up with some kind of a schedule," Denise said.

Ford and union officials indicated that they wanted to keep the meeting going. The strike of 160,000 auto workers halted production in the U.S. of 10,000 Ford cars and trucks a day. Observers here believe that the strike will last at least two months because of the wide gap between the union's demands and the company's proposals.

The union wants pay and fringe benefit increases of at least 6 per cent a year, or 90 cents an hour, over three years. Ford offered an increase of 4 per cent a year, or 55 to 60 cents an hour, over three years.

In addition, the union says that Ford has not offered to put workers on salary or to give them a guaranteed annual wage or to equalize pay between Canadian and American auto workers. These are all key union demands.

Nonmoney matters and disputes at individual Ford plants also remain to be resolved.

The negotiators may not resume "big table" sessions immediately. "They may want to feel each other out on smaller matters first," one union official said.

Contracts between the union and Chrysler and General Motors Corporation expired at midnight Wednesday, as did Ford's contract. Only Ford was struck, however, this was a union tactic to put pressure on Ford.

General Motors and Chrysler refused to extend their union contracts. This was a tactic to put pressure on the union. Both companies, however, have kept their plants running.

Talks between the union and G.M. and Chrysler are recessed.

So far there have been no walkouts at G.M. or Chrysler plants organized by the auto workers union. About 12,000 workers at G.M.'s frigid plant in Dayton, Ohio, stopped working last week. But those workers are members of the International Union of Electrical Workers, not the auto workers, although the I.U.E. bargains with the U.A.W. at G.M. Auto workers union officials feared there might be some "sympathy" walkouts at G.M. and Chrysler plants following the firing last week of 37 workers and the disciplining by layoffs of others. The men who were fired and disciplined are U.A.W. members but were disciplined for taking part in picketing by the International Society of Skilled Trades, a rival union that is trying to split skilled workers from the auto workers union.

Accused Slayer To Go on Trial In Arizona

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Robert Benjamin Smith, 18, charged with slaying four women and a child in a beauty school in nearby Mesa 10 months ago, goes on trial today.

A delay in the trial was granted by Superior Court Judge Laurence Wren "to let the publicity die down." And it has. Wren says the news media cooperated in playing down the story which attracted nationwide attention when it broke.

Smith was arrested at the beauty school shortly after the seven victims, two of whom were wounded, were forced to lie on the floor like the spokes of a wheel before being shot in the head. He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

The state's main witness is expected to be Bonita Sue Harris, 18, the only adult to survive the shooting. The other survivor was an infant.

Miss Harris has never told publicly of the Saturday morning when Smith allegedly entered the beauty school and killed the four women and a child. She testified for about an hour at Smith's preliminary hearing, held behind closed doors.

In loving memory...

Senate Unit to Expand Its Probe of Newspaper Industry

By JOHN HERBERS
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — The Senate anti-trust and monopoly subcommittee has decided to expand its investigation of the newspaper industry into four specific areas: exclusivity of syndicated features and columns, pricing practices of the wire services, newsprint costs and the demise of the New York World Journal Tribune.

The hearings, which opened July 12, have aroused so much controversy and raised so many questions that they are now expected to extend into next year. Already, the course of the hearings has made it appear unlikely that the subcommittee would recommend legislation in the form under consideration. The basis for the investigation is a bill introduced by Sen. Carl Hayden, D-Ariz., which would exempt from the anti-trust laws a merger or joint operating agreement between a "failing" and an economically healthy newspaper.

The bill was specifically intended to protect the joint operation of two Tucson newspapers, The Daily Citizen and The Daily Star, now under attack by the Anti-Trust Division of the Justice Department. But it also would protect more than 20 other joint newspaper operations across the country.

The hearings, which were recessed Aug. 15 until later in the year, probably December, showed widespread disagreement within the publishing field as to the merits of the bill. Of the 40 witnesses who testified, 25 expressed opposition to the bill.

Most of these witnesses contended that newspapers should not be given a blanket exemption not available to other businesses and that the legislation would foster monopolies and chain operations. Advocates of the bill said it would preserve independent editorial voices by reducing the publishing costs through the merger of the business side of newspapers.

Lynda Bird: Bright, Attractive, Retiring

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK—One year ago, Miss Johnson began job hunting at various magazine offices in New York City. She spent many of her evenings at the time with George Hamilton, the actor with whom she recently broke up.

In 1965, Miss Johnson had done freelance writing for the National Geographic Magazine and McCall's during an archeological trip to the southwest. Last September she went to work for McCall's in New York, arriving three hours late for her first day on the job, and eluding photographers with the aid of a detachment of Secret Service men.

She had graduated with honors the preceding June from the University of Texas, and was assigned by the magazine as a writer and consultant on "young Americans and college campuses."

An editor said her salary was "under $10,000 a year." Lynda, who is 5 feet 10 inches tall and wears a size 12 dress, has brown eyes, dimples, and sufficiently attractive features to have won her first place in several teenage beauty contests. Lynda generally got better grades in school than her younger sister Luci. At college, Lynda was accepted into honorary fraternities for her scholarship in history, classics and government.

A somewhat retiring girl, she said at one time that she planned to miss her college graduation because "you don't feel any personal connection with it." She later decided to go "because it may mean something to other people."

Despite the frequent rumors about Miss Johnson's supposed engagement to Hamilton, the couple never announced any plans. Hamilton's draft deferment and friendship with the President's daughter attracted a flood of protest letters to Selective Service officials. Hamilton had been granted a hardship 3A classification, on grounds that he was the sole support of his mother.

Lynda and her sister Luci sometimes had to do without parents during political campaign seasons. Lynda recalled that as a teenager she would sometimes become lonely and wander into her mother's room, smelling the perfume, to get a feel of "her presence."

Despite these separations, outsiders have had the impression that President Johnson always made the really important decisions in the lives of his daughters.

Lynda was engaged to Barnard Rosenbach, for example, but broke the engagement after the White House let it be known that the President would be happier if Lynda "delayed" her wedding.

Mrs. Johnson said: "Lynda always consults her father about her boy friends."

GRIN AND BEAR IT BY LICHTY

"... And by discriminating looters everywhere, this model is grabbed twice as much as the next leading brand."

Sen. Philip A. Hart of Michigan, subcommittee chairman, has indicated that he would have difficulty recommending the blanket exemption proposed in the bill. He has said he will wait until the hearings are over before deciding what kind of legislation, if any, is needed. The testimony raised questions that Hart said needed further exploration and would form the basis for the subsequent hearings.

These are the chief questions that the subcommittee wants answered:

—Is the practice of syndicates in granting to a newspaper within a large geographical area the exclusive right to their columns and features a violation of the anti-trust laws and how does this practice affect the chances of a new newspaper trying to break into the market?

—Do the pricing policies of the news services discourage the starting of a new newspaper? Witnesses complained of being required to pay at least a year in advance at the top price for the market or of not being able to acquire a basic wire service at any price when starting a new paper.

—Do newspaper companies give special discounts to some newspapers, making it difficult for others to compete with them? The subcommittee is particularly interested in newspapers that hold stock in newspaper companies. Until 15 years ago, newspaper prices had long been the subject of congressional investigations.

—What were the causes of the death of the World Journal Tribune earlier this year? Several witnesses testified on this subject and the subcommittee is reported to believe that further information in this failure may illuminate its entire inquiry.

The World Journal Tribune was the result of a merger of three New York papers owned by the Hearst, Scripps-Howard and Whitney interests. The subcommittee is expected to look especially into the management decisions that may have contributed to the demise.

Ailing Pope Addresses Audience

By ROBERT C. DOTY
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
ROME — Pope Paul VI, his face slightly drawn, his voice weaker than usual as a result of his current illness, yesterday made his regular Sunday midday appearance at his palace window to bless thousands in St. Peter's Square below. This glimpse of the pontiff's slender, white robed figure, waving and speaking for six minutes from the fourth floor window of the Vatican palace in bright noon sunlight, served to reassure the faithful that Pope Paul's illness is not now regarded as grave.

In his brief homily, the pope sought also to allay concern by saying that "it appears that we will soon overcome" the illness that struck him last Monday at Castel Gandolfo, his summer residence in the Alban hills south of Rome. This was described late Saturday night by Prof. Mario Fontana, the papal physician, as "acute systolitis," an infection of the renal and urinary system.

The illness, the pope said, gave him the opportunity to do that which he had urged others to do in the face of suffering mortal life—"to accept it humbly from the always fatherly hands of God and to offer it to him in union with that of Christ the redeemer."

But his health, Pope Paul said, was of secondary importance to the needs of the church itself and the well being of the world, threatened by many perils.

The pope noted that the church was approaching two important events, the synod of the representatives of the World Episcopal Hierarchy beginning Sept. 29 and the World Congress of Catholic Laity convening in mid-October.

"And then," he went on, "so many other great questions have need to obtain the favor of God. The world: you yourselves see how tense and dramatic still is its situation."

Then, in what appeared to be a reference to Italian President Giuseppe Saragat's departure today on a world tour or French President Charles de Gaulle's current visit to Poland or both, he added:

"Fortunately, many good wills are in action. These frequent voyages by chiefs of state and responsible men certainly are guided by noble intentions for peace. For these great motives let us pray, most dear children..."

Debra Dene Barnes Begins Reign as 'Miss America'

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Debra Dene Barnes, a pert brunette from Kansas, began her reign as Miss America yesterday on a note of elation but with a tinge of sadness.

At a news conference, the 20-year-old music major was asked what she would do if she suddenly had $1 million.

"I would buy a grand piano and donate the rest to research for multiple sclerosis," she replied. Her mother was stricken with the crippling muscle disease 11 years ago and has been bedridden in a Fort Scott, Kan., hospital for the last two and a half years.

When Debra was crowned Miss America Saturday night, Mrs. Barnes was in Mercy Hospital unaware of her daughter's triumph.

A hospital spokesman said yesterday that "it appears she realizes it now. We read her telegrams of congratulations this morning and she watched it on television last night."

"But we can't be sure, she cannot communicate," the spokesman explained. "It's really sad, she is a beautiful woman who looks like Debbie."

Debra, who wants to teach piano on the college level and perform, is a junior at Kansas State College. The new Miss America stands 5-foot-9, weighs 135 pounds and measures 36½-24-36½.

The new queen, attired in a white evening gown and wearing her crown, discussed a variety of topics during the morning conference.

Later in the evening Debra was scheduled to visit New York City, on what would be the first of 200,000 miles she will travel during her year-long reign.

Miss America received a $10,000 scholarship for winning the crown and will earn an estimated $90,000 in personal appearance fees.

Gibraltar Colonists Vote To Retain Ties with British

By TAD SZULC

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
GIBRALTAR—The people of Gibraltar voted yesterday by an apparently overwhelming margin to retain their link with Britain rather than return to Spanish sovereignty.

The vote for Britain was 99.4 per cent with 12,138 Gibraltarians choosing continuing ties with the crown and only 44 favoring union with Spain. An excited crowd, massed in front of the theater where the ballots were tabulated broke into loud cheers and the singing of "God Save the Queen" as the results were announced.

On Sept. 1, the United Nations special committee on colonialism declared that a referendum in Gibraltar would violate the United Nations charter. It said the present residents of the British colony were not entitled to self-determination because they were not indigenous to the territory.

Held under British auspices and inspected by four high commonwealth officials acting as observers, the referendum was designed to convince Spain, the United Nations and the world that Gibraltar does not wish to be "decolonized." More than 75 per cent of the Gibraltar civilian population of 25,000 were born here and many families trace their origins to the 18th century.

The voters were given bilingual ballots, printed in Spanish and English, to register their preference.

The majority of the voters chatted together in Spanish as they formed queues in front of the four polling stations to cast the ballots they marked at "alternative B," signifying their desire to retain Gibraltar's links with Britain and preserve "the democratic local institutions."

"Alternative A" on the ballot was the acceptance of Spanish proposals presented to Britain in May, 1966, and calling for the cancellation of the Treaty of Utrecht of 1713, which legalized the British occupation of Gibraltar during the war of succession of 1704.

In the U.N.—recommended negotiations, Spain had offered to negotiate with Britain the maintenance of the Gibraltar military base and to protect and guarantee the interests and rights of the Gibraltar people. The negotiations broke off last April, after Spain imposed new restrictions on access to Gibraltar over Spain's air space. Britain then moved to call yesterday's referendum. Spain, in turn, won a condemnation of the decolonization as a violation of the mandate for continuing British-Spanish negotiations.

The balloting yesterday was carried out in an orderly but boisterous and defiant fashion which gave the atmosphere of a patriotic carnival.

Meeting Brings No End To Dispute Over Cyprus

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
ALEXANDROUPOLEIS, Greece — Greece and Turkey ended their two-day summit conference on Cyprus late last night. It was apparent that no agreement had been reached.

Official Greek optimism had earlier led to hopes of a breakthrough in the 14-year-old dispute over the political future of Cyprus, the Mediterranean island whose population is four-fifths Greek and one-fifth Turkish.

But an official joint-communique issued last night after Greek Premier Constantine Kollis and Turkey's Premier Suleyman Demirel and their eight-man delegations had been in session for a total of 14 hours, merely expressed hope of a future rapprochement.

The communique said: "The two premiers expressed in detail their points of view on the Cyprus question and underlined the major importance that public opinion in both countries attaches to this issue. They acknowledged the fact that the resumption of good and cordial relations between their two countries depended in the first instance on an equitable solution of this problem. They agreed therefore to continue, through the appropriate channels, the exploration of possibilities for a rapprochement of their viewpoints on this issue.

"They have also acknowledged the need to take appropriate measures to avert the increase of tension in Cyprus and protect as well as facilitate efforts aimed at devising a peaceful and concerted solution."

The communique also spoke of the need for friendship and cooperation but proposed no concrete action in that direction.

One line of speculation suggested here to explain the disparity between early official Greek optimism and yesterday's communique was that if Greece and Turkey had agreed on a settlement that Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, might reject they would use a smoke screen to avert opposition until the Greek Cypriotes were induced or coerced to endorse the formula.

The summit conference moved to this city on the Turkish border yesterday after a first session Saturday in the Turkish border township of Kessan.

As yesterday's session lasted nine hours the Turkish premier had to cancel arrangements to fly back to Istanbul for an official dinner given by visiting King Hussein of Jordan.

Best of Everything

Headline stories have followed a depressing theme of the failures and shortcomings of the U.S. Many good citizens are failing to look for the things that are right with this country as well as the things that are wrong with it. For these people, the remarks of Commissioner Willard Deason of the Interstate Commerce Commission should have special meaning. He lists the many complaints of the "cussers" which range from Vietnam to inadequate high schools and high food prices.

Deason says, "With all these tales of doom and gloom, I was mildly surprised to learn of the thousands of scientists, doctors, and engineers from other countries who are pouring into the United States each year. This so-called 'brain drain' annually involves as many foreign doctors as 30 medical schools can graduate. Five thousand foreign engineers and scientists come to America annually.

WASHINGTON—Tempers ran high in the Department of Juvenile Affairs when the Secretary suggested that the magic was relatively weak stuff.

"My magic best magic of all," insisted the Chief of Magic for Air. "Push button, boom-boom birds dark sky. Push button again, make even spirit leap from earth, do first-class job retaliation."

"Chief of Magic for Air speak with balcony tongue," said a young Elder. "Big mind no substitute for bad magic. Move big budget out this big-wind Magic Department, Mr. Chairman."

"Wait!" roared the Chief of Magic for Air, spreading his might wings. "Hear truth about Secretary of Juvenile Affairs. Your magic too strong, boom-boom boys. Too much boom-boom bad politics. You make weak medicine, savvy? You make little bim-bam, no boom-boom, stuff. You catch? Chop chop."

The Council was astounded. Did the Chief of Magic for Air mean that he could really make better medicine?

"Best medicine around," he replied. "You make Secretary of Juvenile Affairs, 'Okay, boys' everything turn out number one. We make interdiction."

SYLVIA PORTER

'Nightmare' Pattern

This is the "nightmare" pattern which is now being drawn for the U.S. economy and for our pocketbooks—as wage or salary earners, as business men, as housewives.

(1) A rapidly accelerating rise in the cost of living. It involves goods and services across-the-board and is being caused both by mounting costs pushing up prices and by mounting demands pulling up prices. This, in short, is the dread coinciding of the two types of inflation, "cost-push" and "demand-pull."

(2) Climbing Federal, State and local taxes on individuals and corporations. Rarely has the tax bite come from so many directions at the same time. This reflects the urgent effort of each level of government to grab a bigger share of our incomes to finance an ever swelling total of spending.

(3) Historically steep interest rates, plus increasing curbs on the amount of credit available to borrowers. This is the inevitable result of today's huge demands for credit and of the Federal Reserve System's efforts to combat inflation by limiting the supply of credit and making borrowing more difficult.

(4) A stickily high jobless rate among unskilled and minority group workers — side by side with shortages of many types of skilled workers. This is a dangerous combination because the shortages of skilled workers threaten our economic growth while the surpluses of unskilled, untrained workers are obvious social-economic-political dynamite.

(5) A Federal budget flooded with red ink despite income tax increases and general prosperity. This reflects the skyrocketing expenses of the Vietnam war, and not the expansion of spending for desirable domestic programs.

(6) More red ink in our international financial accounts (balance of payments) which means a continuing drain on our already seriously depleted gold reserves. This stems from the fact that we are still spending far more abroad than we are earning abroad, and there is no hope for a significant change for the better as long as we are pouring out so much for Vietnam.

A grim listing? You bet it is! Each for itself would be a grave enough challenge. All together, they add up to economic nightmare, and I kid you not.

Yet, I am not exaggerating one bit in this listing. Actually all I am doing is summarizing in one column developments I have been reporting in print for many months in separate stories. The summary gives the story perspective.

There is no doubting that the pace of inflation is quickening and no ducking the evidence that this is just the start of the new acceleration. Price increases are being posted every day and we're hearing and reading about only the big ones. The steel price hike is in itself important but it is symbolic. It's commonplace now to hear about price markups in lumber, plywood, chemicals, sulphur, aluminum, rubber, color TV, copper and on. What's more, the fact that these increases are taking place while industry is still operating below capacity signals a real danger of speed-up when industry's operations climb closer to capacity. At the same time, the automobile wage settlement will unquestionably set a new target for other unions and cost pressures on prices will intensify.

On top of these disturbing inflationary factors comes the warning by both businessmen and labor leaders that they will try to offset coming income tax increases by raising prices and wage demands. One individual who does not come out ahead in this leapfrog race is the consumer.

As for the income tax surcharge, it's a probability for Jan. 1, 1968. Without it, the deficit in our Federal budget could reach monstrous proportions. Without it, the Federal Reserve System might feel it had to fight inflation by tightening credit to a crisis point.

Overall, our economy is in the greatest economic upturn of all history. Next month, the expansion will be 90 months old, matching the boom that spanned World War II.

But no longer is it the healthy balanced expansion of the early 1960s. In fact, it has developed, as this analysis has indicated, some nightmarish aspects.

ly. And nearly 40 per cent of the physicists who received their Ph.D.s abroad end up in the U.S.A." He then goes on to remind us that, "Americans are the best fed, best paid, and best educated people in the world," and concludes, "That's what's right with America."

As Herbert Hoover said on the occasion of his 90th birthday, "The critics say we seem to be in a very, very bad way, and engaged in our decline and fall. Criticism is no doubt good for the soul, but we must beware that it does not upset our confidence in ourselves. So perhaps the time has come for Americans to take stock and to think something good about themselves."

In brief, our country is a good land and not the least of its virtues is that we have the inalienable right of cussing the government as loud and long as we please without being penalized, jailed or worse.

Duncy and Chauncy

You remember Duncy, He was the fat little character with the duck feet who paid $450 for the cabinet Hi-Fi and found it contained a $40 automobile radio. He also invested a few bob in perpetual motion machines; an invention to make a car run on water; and a cigarette with no tobacco and a two-foot filter.

He isn't quite bright. But he has money, and he fancies himself a tough man to sell. He didn't earn the money. He inherited a lot of stocks from a father who watched Duncy grow up, and shot himself.

Duncy has a wife named Helene — not Helen—who has forgotten more about her husband than any woman wants to remember.

She too is stout. One morning she teased her hair so high that the lower lids climbed to the eyebrows. She looked like Mrs. Mao. They own a big house in a fashionable neighborhood. Sometimes it is full of cats, and sometimes it is full of other things.

They live next door to Chauncy Delacorte, the famous wag. He plays jokes on people. He is a bald sprite with mischievous brown eyes. Once, you may recall, I told you about Duncy getting up at dawn and standing on the diving board over his swimming pool, singing arias. Chauncy fixed him. One night he dumped twenty barrels of lime Jello in Duncy's pool and then sat up behind the venetian blinds watching.

Duncy came outdoors in his trunk, smiling at the blue-green of the pool, and ran through an atrocious chorus of something from Rigoletto. He hit the high note, then the high note hit him. He went off the board, straight down, and for the first time, the waves remained parted.

There was a lot of suspicion about the matter, but no police action. Six weeks ago, Duncy said he wanted to buy a second car and he asked Chaunce to advise him. Baldy said a Volkswagen was a good buy. Duncy asked why, and Chaunce said, "Well, it's economical and it's..."

"That's enough," Duncy said, "if it's economical, I want it. They went downtown together, and Duncy bought the Volkswagen. He really liked it. It was small and zippy and different. "Wait'll you see the mileage you get on gasoline," Chaunce said.

Duncy parked it out in the driveway. Every night, Chaunce went out with cans of gasoline and filled the tank. Stupid drove it ten days and he was losing his mind with joy. "I've been all over the state three times," he told Chaunce, "and I'm still on the first tank of gasoline. The way I figure, I'm getting 630 miles to the gallon, Yep."

Mysteriously, the gasoline tank was filled every night for a month. Duncy told his wife they might never have to buy gasoline. Then Chaunce reversed himself. Every night, he moved into Duncy's driveway in silence and siphoned gasoline from the tank. In two days, Duncy was crying.

"Something happened," he said. "I was getting 630 miles to the gallon. Now I fill the tank at night and in the morning I back out of the driveway and the damn thing dies at the first light." Chaunce suggested that they go down to the salesroom and talk it over with the salesman.

"Good idea," Duncy snapped. "They can't hornswoggle me. I'm a tough hombre, I am." So they went down and Chaunce walked into the salesroom behind Duncy. The salesman saw them, and Chaunce pointed his index finger at his head and made circular motions. He pointed at Duncy and did it again.

"Listen, you," said Duncy loudly. "I bought this car in good faith and I was getting a nice 630 gallons to the mile — I mean, 630 miles to the gallon. Now it needs a tankful to get to the corner. How come?"

The salesman appeared to be perplexed. Chaunce remained behind Duncy, making the motions of the nut. "Ah," the salesman said, "I see. It sounds as though you may have lost your tippy tappet. Let me check, sir." They went out to the car, and the salesman gave it a good examination and found that there was nothing wrong with the automobile. Then he pretended to find something at the bottom of the engine. "Why, there it is, sir," he said. "It was your tippy tappet," and he pretended to screw something back.

Duncy left happily. Chaunce decided to forget the car; end of joke. A few days later, he was leaving his own driveway when he saw Duncy's car parked in front. A sign on it said: "Buy this lemon cheap. Only 35 miles to the gallon!"

Cigar Smoker vs. Cigaret

WASHINGTON—As the World Conference on Smoking and Health opens today Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., a cigar smoker, plans to raise Cain with the big cigar companies and the big TV broadcasters for their refusal to label cigarette packages with nicotine content.

Magnuson, who is Chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, has found that two cigarette companies, Stephano Brothers, and Lorillard, manufacture "Marvel" and "True" respectively, in which the nicotine content is low. However, Magnuson has also found that Reynolds and American Tobacco products — Pall Mall, Winston, Camel — are high in tar and nicotine. At present these latter two companies enjoy a major portion of the market and don't want to risk losing it by any requirement that tar and nicotine content be printed on the cigarette package.

The National Association of Broadcasters supports the tobacco majors. Cigarette advertising constitutes a $900,000,000 chunk of radio and TV advertising. Its executives are opposed to any differentiation as between high and low nicotine cigarettes.

Another potent figure bucking any labeling of nicotine and tar content is ex-Governor Robert Meyner of New Jersey, who is now czar of the tobacco industry. Bob was a good Governor of New Jersey and is also good at protecting his tobacco clients, regardless of the public health. He has been adamant against any labeling of nicotine and tar content.

Sen. Magnuson, however, is in a position to introduce laws requiring this health safeguard. He plans to hold hearings and move to this end. Note—One interesting point sure to be raised with the airlines is why they distribute free cigarettes to passengers; also, why they don't segregate cigarette smokers from non-smoking passengers as do railroads and buses.

It's been nine months since Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, the Harlem Globe-Trotter, was kicked out of Congress for globe-trotting too freely on other people's credit cards. Finally the House Ethics Committee, under conscientious veteran Mel Price, D-Ill., has been getting down to the problem of setting up a code of ethics to prevent similar conduct by other Congressmen.

Committee members didn't like it at all, however, when Rep. Ogden Reid of New York, an impatient Republican, issued a press statement declaring the American people had lost confidence in Congress. His fellow Republican, Rep.

The 'Balanced Budget' Angle

HARRISBURG — Governor Shafer's insistence that he needs some $300 million in new tax monies to "balance" his budget for the next fiscal year, over which the Legislature is due to pick up its fiduciary once again this week, actually has a more than familiar ring.

We're not referring to the "size" of the increased spending proposed by Mr. Shafer with the accompanying enlarged tax bundle (although this has a somewhat familiar ring too) but rather to the "balanced budget" angle itself.

In recent years the idea of a balanced budget seemingly has become almost a mania with chief executives (as it should) — the only trouble is that the balanced budgets seemingly develop on paper only and not too often in fact.

They're either overloaded with surpluses or deficit-ridden — or does a balanced budget constitute a fiscal vehicle that can have a healthy surplus (at taxpayer expense, of course)? The "healthy surplus" seems to have become a way of life on Pennsylvania's Capitol Hill in recent years — a "plus" unbalanced budget instead of a "minus" unbalanced budget. Certainly one is just as wrong

Charley Halleck, of Indiana, immediately jumped all over Reid at an Ethics Committee hearing. Halleck is sometimes called "Two Cadillac Charley" because of his ability to get Cadillacs during the scarce war period.

"I just don't think it's true that the country has lost confidence in Congress," Halleck exploded.

Rep. Reid, who once served as editor of the New York Herald Tribune and as U.S. Ambassador to Israel, stuck to his guns.

"I think there is no question but what there has been a loss of confidence in the integrity of Congress," he replied. "If you look at press accounts of what the average fellow on the street says, there has been a concern about the Adam Clayton Powell case, about Senator Dodd."

"We are concerned with those too," replied Halleck. "But where do you go from there? The people I have talked to, Ogden, don't conclude from that that we are all of that stripe. I must say, I am sorry you put that flat statement in."

"If Congress doesn't act with greater dispatch than we have the last few years on this matter," insisted Reid, "I don't think that public confidence is going to be enhanced."

Rep. Les Arends, R-Ill., sided with Halleck. "The articles we see in the paper leave the impression we are a bunch of bums, like this one by a Washington Post columnist that there is nothing but drunkenness going on up here on the hill," he said. "This is why they think we are a bunch of bums, I don't believe that people as a whole have lost their sense of fairness in criticizing the Congress."

"I don't think they have, either," replied Reid, "but I do think that the remedy lies in sound action by the Committee. I think the area where I would lean the hardest would be on the disclosure of sources of income. I think the public is entitled to know the basic area of sources of income."

Rep. Watkins Abbott, D-Va., "Do you think that this release (Reid's news statement), which will undoubtedly get widespread coverage, will add to the growing concern of the people?"

Reid — "I think that the only thing that will add to the concern, basically, is if the Congress does not take some reasonable action — hopefully this year, I am just saying that many Americans have some doubts. I think that the point is for us to take some action and remove any concern that may exist."

Chairman Mel Price — "We all agree with you on that. We want to remove any concern."

Halleck — "We will not remove all of it, not in the minds of some of the columnists."

It doesn't take too much stretching of the memory to recall that when Mr. Lawrence assumed the gubernatorial robes (along with his balanced budget theme) in 1959, in his message to lawmakers he asked approval of his financing program which in his own words he said "will end the continuing series of deficits which now trouble our affairs, and will provide the Commonwealth with a sound balance of revenues and expenditures in the years ahead."

But alas, when Mr. Lawrence presented his budget message to lawmakers in January of 1961 for fiscal 1961-62 and recounted the fiasco of the last "balanced budget" he had this to say:

"We would have realized our hope for such a fiscal balance — if our national economy had maintained a level of relatively full employment and normal corporate profits. But, as you must know — our revenues for the 1959-61 biennium will be about $53,000,000 less than we had estimated..."

Mr. Lawrence's successor, Republican William Warren Scranton wound up on the other side of the fence, having been pestered with surpluses throughout his tenure. Incumbent Governor Shafer is "fighting" one he inherited — but it's peanuts beside the more than a quarter-billion dollars in new taxes he insists he needs to "balance his present fiscal tome!"

WILLIAM BUCKLEY

No More Comrades

A brilliantly informed editor of an August national publication mused at lunch that surely the national torment over Vietnam traces to the global unintelligibility of Lyndon Johnson's position. If Vietnam is a local affair, we have no more business dying there than we do dying for the freedom of Biafra. If it is a part of an international enterprise of which we are intended as the strategic victims, then by all means we must be prepared to die there, in order to interdict a major salient that might otherwise reach across the Pacific to our own continental shoreline.

Buckley

But Mr. Johnson, whose habit of mind is schizophrenic in so many things, confuses us. It isn't only our uncanny bridge-building to Eastern Europe and Russia, though that is confusing enough if we meditate on the exorcising paradox that machinery made in America is used to make products to sustain the Viet Cong army. It goes beyond that, to the point, of a creeping softness towards Communism, of which there have been several recent expressions.

Consider that Secretary Robert S. McNamara, in his extended report to the Senate Armed Services Committee defending the current stalemate in Vietnam, disdains to refer, even one time, to the North Vietnamese as "the enemy." From which it naturally follows that vis-a-vis the North Vietnamese we must watch ourselves very carefully, must be careful not to close their ports, not to interfere unduly with their agriculture or commerce. Air strikes against the movement of provisions to South Vietnam yes, but carefully, oh so carefully, much as we would be careful to respect, to the extent possible, our neighbor's property even while making use of it to fight a fire on the adjacent lot. The war in Vietnam, says Mr. McNamara has to do with assuring "the people of South Vietnam the freedom to choose their own political and economic institutions." Period? If so, of course, we have no business there. It is an inescapable conclusion that we are refusing to impose our will on North Vietnam because we are afraid that to do so would get in the way of the grander policy of convergence.

Anti-Communism, we all know, is unfashionable. Snick was only a couple of years ahead of the trend when its officers said coolly in 1964 that they knew there were Communists in their organization, so what?

Mr. Kingsley Amis, the British novelist, writes bitterly about his disillusion with the Left he cherished for so many years. "I might think differently if Mr. Wilson had done what he ought to do and what, after gaining his increased majority last year, I fairly fully expected him to do: boot half a dozen of the Communist M.P.'s out of the Labour Party and threaten the rest with expulsion unless they step into line. And say why."

"Why? For a set of reasons odiously familiar to both sides in this matter: because a Communist's loyalties lie, not with his own country, but with a foreign Power, one that is, both externally and internally, hostile to democracy, and therefore our enemy. To some of us, enemies of our country are worth opposing; others find something positively attractive about them. It is having at last become fully aware of this that has led me finally to break off my lingering love-hate affair with the Left..."

It can't happen here? But it has happened, in a strange sort of way in the Viet Nam war, our bizarre conduct of which may well be viewed by historians not as anti-Communism, but as anti-anti-Communism.

That's the way it's going everywhere. "I'm an open Communist," Don Hamerquist (of Portland, Oregon) said. "I believe in being open. I'm also a division leader in the Democratic party — I have 24 precincts under my jurisdiction. I assume the party leaders know about it by now." Well, John Bailey at least knows about it because an editor down in Florida saw the clipping from the Oregon Journal and asked Bailey for an explanation. It came. Sorry about that, it said, but we can't do anything about it — local government you know. (You know how much the Democratic party cares about local government.) Ex-pelling Mr. Hamerquist from the Democratic party would be like bombing Haiphong. You just don't treat Communists like enemies.

Trouble in the Schoolhouse

WASHINGTON — This seems truly a season of disruption and disillusion. The war in Vietnam and the burning of the cities have exposed all our assumptions about ourselves to doubt and dismay. Now one of the most cherished of American traditions—the annual opening of free public schools for all—is being widely frustrated by teachers' strikes.

How can this be justified? Nothing is more ingrained in the American mind than the notion that children are entitled to education; few things in American life command from all of us more money, energy and devotion than the public school system; and the inestimable role of a good and respected teacher in the lives of his students is bound to be diminished when he is willing to abandon it in dispute over the cash price of his time and services.

On the other hand, what most teachers have to work for in this affluent society, with its immense social and economic pressures for education, is ludicrous. Some janitors and many laborers are paid more.

In Paducah, Ky., teachers are earning only $5,100 to $6,950 a year and have closed the schools in a strike for $300 more a year; there are only 250 of them and thus only $75,000 at stake. In East St. Louis, an injunction has been issued against teachers striking for a salary range of $6,400 to $8,900, against the present range of $6,200 to $8,750. What can either side be thinking of to deprive children of even a day's education for such sums? And whether the new pay scales are won or not, teachers in Paducah and East St. Louis will be miserably underpaid for the great responsibility that American society demands of them.

In most of the strikes and mass resignations, the teachers are demanding not only more money but better conditions for teaching and better school administration. Thus, in some cases, the struggle is for considerably more than the size of a paycheck; in others, the teachers' concern for education seems to be window dressing for their economic demands.

Thus, there seems to be no clear pattern to the teachers' revolt, but at least two inferences seem warranted. One is that despite a great deal of lip service, American devotion to the idea of free public schools has never been as strong as the traditional American reluctance to make private wealth available for public purposes.

Moreover, where public sector spending has been anything near adequate, it has usually been for material, tangible facilities—school buildings, for instance, or paved streets. Teachers' salaries, social welfare funds, and other less obvious needs have always hovered near starvation in this country. It is easier to get voters to approve a bond issue to build a school gymnasium than it is to increase taxes to raise teachers' salaries.

It is simply not possible, however, to hand the public school teacher the vital responsibilities that American society now demands of them, and continue to pay them less than a truck driver, a football coach or a soda jerk. Economic recognition of the teacher's real value cannot be postponed much longer, as this year's strikes have demonstrated.

Paradoxically, the strikes also suggest how unsuited the teaching profession is to the techniques of industrial unionism. Teachers are not assembly-line workers, whose value is based on productivity; they are, or should be, true artisans whose worth is measured not quantitatively but by the excellence of what they do.

Industrial unionism will not only win for many low-grade and unqualified teachers the same pay raise and perquisites that their more deserving colleagues get; it will cement the poorest as well as the best of teachers into the profession through seniority, job security provisions and all the other devices labor has developed for its own protection; and it will insulate all teachers against public desires and influence. This will almost surely produce worse teaching at a higher cost. The unions, moreover, may learn to use the strike weapon or the new technique of mass resignations in order to influence school administration, curriculum matters, and other noneconomic questions in their favor; ultimately, aggressive unions might gain effective control of the public schools.

That kind of unionism would be bad for the school system but so, surely, is the public niggardliness that has forced teachers at last to resort to strikes.

To Raise Price

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Sunday Bulletin will raise its price from 20 cents to 25 cents a copy.

The newspaper, with a circulation of 723,000, said the increase is necessary to offset rising costs of raw materials, production and distribution of the newspaper. A substantial part of the increase will go to carriers, stores and corner newsboys, it said in a front page announcement Sunday.

House Plans to Hold Up Action On Remaining Tax Legislation

By PAUL ZDINAK
HARRISBURG (AP) — The House plans to hold up action on remaining tax bills pending developments in the Senate on two House-passed tax measures and $91.5 million in preferred appropriation bills.

"We have no intention of moving any tax bills this week," House Majority Leader Lee A. Donaldson said over the weekend.

The Allegheny County Republican said he wanted to see what the Senate would do with the House-passed cigarette and corporate net income tax bills. They are expected to produce $128 million in revenue year-ly.

Both chambers return to work today following a week's lay-off for Labor Day.

Left in the House are several business tax bills and controversial tax proposals dealing with life insurance benefits, beer, liquor and restaurant meals. They total about $160 million.

Although fiscal matters continue to dominate activity on Capitol Hill, Donaldson stressed that important non-money bills are being kept in mind.

The GOP floor leader said final floor action is expected this week on measures to forbid the arbitrary refusal to write auto insurance, reform the adoption law, tighten the law on obscene literature and encourage private enterprise to eradicate slums.

Donaldson also said the 22 preferred appropriation bills left on the House calendar would be reviewed with an eye toward final passage sometime this week.

In the Senate, a ranking Republican said he believed the issue of state aid to nonpublic schools should be debated by the legislature before final action is taken on Gov. Shafer's $285 million tax package.

"I don't believe it would be wise to pass a tax program to meet the budget needs and then turn to the question of aid to the parochial and private schools," said Sen. T. Newell Wood.

The Luzerne County Republican is chairman of the powerful Ways and Means Committee to which the two House-passed tax bills will be referred.

A bill proposing creation of a nonpublic school authority to reimburse private and parochial schools for secular education services is before the House Appropriations Committee.

Advocates of nonpublic school aid have been bombarding the Governor's office and their legislators with letters and telegrams. "This is really getting hot," one influential Republican confided.

As for the current fiscal situation, Senate President Pro Tempore Robert D. Fleming indicated he personally would rather wait until the House had cleared the entire tax package rather than have the Senate act on the revenue measures piecemeal.

Driver, 71, is Killed in Headon

WASHINGTON, Pa. (AP) — Two cars collided headon yesterday, killing John H. Drury, 71, of Abington, and injuring two other persons.

State police said a car driven by Drury crossed the medial barrier on U.S. 40 about two miles west of Claysville in Washington County, striking an oncoming car.

Injured were the occupants of the other car, Pearl Dozkan, 48, of Monroeville and David Stampo of Penn Hills.

Garrison Expands Charges in Kennedy Assassination

By DAVID BIRD
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — District Attorney Jim Garrison of New Orleans, expanding on his earlier charges that former Central Intelligence Agency employees were involved in the killing of President John F. Kennedy, has raised to at least seven the number of men he says took a direct part in the assassination.

The new estimate appears in an interview in the October issue of Playboy Magazine, which will go on sale tomorrow.

On one earlier occasion, he said three men were involved, and on another he had said five.

"The President was assassinated," Garrison said in the Playboy interview, "by a precision guerrilla team of at least seven men, including anti-Castro adventurers and members of the paramilitary right."

But he indicated there were even more than seven men. He said "there were at least four men on the grassy knoll, at least two behind the picket fence and two or more behind a small stone wall to the right of the fence... one man fired at the President from each location, while the role of his companion was to snatch up the cartridges as they were ejected."

Garrison said that "in addition to the assassins on the grassy knoll, at least two other men fired from behind the President, one from the book depository building... and one, in all probability from the Dal-Tex building."

Garrison rejects completely the Warren Commission verdict that Lee Harvey Oswald was the lone assassin who fired from behind the President.

Asked why no bullets were found that might have been fired from a point ahead of the President, Garrison said other members of the conspiracy may have removed the evidence.

"In the chaos of November 22nd, this would not have been as difficult as it sounds," he added.

Garrison said that while Oswald was a member of the conspiracy, he fired none of the shots and instead was a scapegoat to divert attention from the other plotters.

The plotters, Garrison claims, were men who were disturbed by Kennedy's peace overtures to Cuba and the Soviet Union. The ex-CIA men, he said, had been employed in an earlier attempt to overthrow the Castro regime.

The key figure in the peace overtures, Garrison said, "was the late television reporter, Lisa Howard, who met secretly with Ernesto Che Guevara, then a chief Castro aide, to prepare peace terms between the U.S. and Castro. Miss Howard was arranging a conference between Bobby Kennedy and Guevara when the President was shot in Dallas."

Miss Howard died after taking an overdose of sleeping pills on July 4, 1965 at her summer home in East Hampton, L.I.

Garrison is currently preparing for the trial of Clay Shaw, a retired New Orleans business man, on charges on conspiring to murder Kennedy.

He said he could not comment "even inferentially on anything pertaining to the evidence against Mr. Shaw, since he's facing trial in my jurisdiction."

Garrison could not be reached yesterday for comment on the Playboy interview.

Conversational Counselling And Compost

By Bernie Wingert, County Agent

Last week, Allen Bauer, Plant Pathology Specialist from Penn State University and I examined Maple trees that are showing severe distress signals. They have scorched leaves turning brown, a number of limbs dying or dead, and small leaves on the tree in general. This is common to many maples while others very nearby are healthy. What's the problem? This trouble has been occurring over much of the state for several years and could be blamed on dry weather in some areas. There isn't any cure-all spray that can be used, but in some cases a good fertilizer program can save the tree for several years.

Shade trees as they grow older of course get bigger and require more food. They can exhaust the supply of plant nutrients in the ground over a period of time.

A fertilizer should be applied to the feeding roots of the tree which will be found beneath the drip of the branch spread. There is a perfect balance ordinarily between the branch system above ground the root system below. Trees may be fertilized at any time of the year provided only organic fertilizer is used. However, when chemical fertilizer is applied it should go on from March 1st to August 1st. As a general rule the seasonal growth of the trees is completed by September.

Water, too, is of real importance to trees but it's difficult to believe that any tree in Warren County can be suffering from lack of water this year. It's been estimated that a tree with a spread of 50 feet will throw off, through transpiration, 30 barrels of water a day. If this is correct, and I've no reason to doubt it, then some trees surrounded by roads, sidewalks and macadam parking lots have reason to look sad.

To get back to actual application of the fertilizer, here's how it's done—

Use any complete fertilizer, such as 10-6-4 or 10-10-10 (by complete we mean containing the three major plant foods—nitrogen, phosphorus and potash) and apply it at the rate of one to three pounds to each one inch diameter of the tree. If the tree stands in the lawn, holes 15 inches in depth should be bored or punched to the outermost spread of the branches. Dump the fertilizer down the hole and fill it with water. There's no faster way to get the tree to take up fertilizer than by this method. These holes are usually spaced about two feet or so apart around the circumference of the branches.

This isn't a particularly easy job to do. Some men I understand can't persuade their wives to get at it, and so a landscape nurseryman can be hired. With an air drill to bore the holes, the chore becomes somewhat less demanding on your back.

You might ask—Why is one tree in my lawn dying while another only twenty-five feet away has luxuriant growth? The only way I can explain some instances is by also asking why do some people have sugar diabetes or rheumatism at 19 while the next door neighbor at 94 has never been sick a day in his life?

Disappointed Dragons Go After Beaver Pelts Tonite

By LARRY STEELE
Sports Editor

Warren Area High School will open the 1967 football season at Corry tonight—maybe.

The Dragon-Beaver contest had been scheduled for Saturday night but was postponed in the early evening after an all-day rain in the area because of the condition of the field.

Corry Head Coach and Athletic Director Lou Hanna said last night that Howard J. Sheen Field, the football and track arena located next to the high school at Corry, was in fair condition at 4 p.m. on Saturday, but that a hard downpour later rendered the gridiron unplayable.

Hanna added that he had been "gambling" that the rain would continue after checking with the U.S. Weather Bureau in Erie, and he guessed right. As the weathermen predicted, a steady rain fell throughout the night.

Under terms of the contract for the game between Warren Area High School and Corry Area High School, the game could be called due to unplayable conditions, a decision to be made by officials of the host school and Hanna arrived at that conclusion.

When informed by Hanna that the game would have to be postponed, WAHS Athletic Director Joe Massa and Principal Joe Passaro met with Dragon Coach Toby Shea to deliberate the next move.

Warren officials were given two alternatives by Hanna: play the game tonight or after the regularly scheduled season had been completed, on Friday, November 10. The only other choice would have been cancellation of the game entirely, a decision that could affect the Dragons' chances for the Section II crown, their relationship with the conference and with Corry.

Coach Shea decided to play the game tonight. Originally slated as an 8 p.m. game, the contest will now start at 7:30 since tomorrow is a school day.

Explaining his reasons for selecting tonight instead of the November 10 date, Shea pointed out that the Blue and White gridders have been practicing for over three weeks and he did not feel that more delay would be fair to the team.

The Dragons were at the high school preparing for the trip when the postponement was announced.

One regrettable aspect of the situation, Shea said, is that the team will have to play two games this week. Friday, Warren travels to Franklin for an expected tough contest with the Knights. Shea hoped that the Blue and White would come out of tonight's contest without serious injury, and stated that the team will have to work tomorrow in preparation for Friday's tilt.

The Dragon mentor reported that his team's attitude toward the game hadn't changed. In fact, he said the Dragons "are more determined than ever" to defeat the Beavers. The delay, he added, "will not stop us."

The postponement marked the second time in three years that a Warren game has been called because of rain, an unthinkable action just a few years ago.

In 1964, Warren's game was postponed at Oil City because of a sudden rainstorm about one-half hour before game time. The decision to not play the game that season was made by Blair Hildebrand, the Oil City athletic director and, at that time, head coach.

That contest was also re-scheduled for the following Monday and was won by the Oilers, 39-20 as "Joltin' Jim" Shaughnessy, Oil City's peerless back, romped for five touchdowns.

Ironically, Hanna had called off the game with Oil City at Corry earlier in the 1964 season for the same reason—rain—but the Oilers, who had already made the trip, returned the following week to defeat the Beavers.

Shea said he and his team would have been willing to play the game on Saturday regardless of weather conditions. The decision was not his, however.

Hanna said last night that it was a certainty that the game would be played tonight. The weather had cleared yesterday and today's forecast calls for more sunny weather. Yesterday's combination of sun and wind, Hanna reported, had dried the field considerably.

One can only guess at the possible outcome had the game been played Saturday. There is no doubt that the Beavers will have to either successfully run outside on the Dragons or pass to post a victory, the type of offense that is best run on a dry field.

Warren, on the other hand, should be able to move the ball on the ground in any kind of weather.

In any event, there should be no excuses one way or the other after tonight.

Unless it snows.

Horlen No-Hits Bengals in ChiSox Sweep

CHICAGO (AP) — Joel Horlen punctuated the torrid American League pennant race by firing a no-hitter yesterday in hurling the Chicago White Sox past the Detroit Tigers 6-0 in the opener of a doubleheader.

The White Sox completed a sweep by taking the nightcap 4-0 behind the five-hit pitching of rookie Francisco Carlos and relievers Hoyt Wilhelm and Bob Locker. The two shutout victories moved the Sox into a third place tie with the Tigers—just 1½ games behind the league leading Minnesota Twins.

The White Sox completed a sweep by taking the nightcap 4-0 behind the five-hit pitching of rookie Francisco Carlos and relievers Hoyt Wilhelm and Bob Locker. The two shutout victories moved the Sox into a fourth place tie with the Tigers—just 14 games behind the league leading Minnesota Twins.

Horlen, at 30 the dean of the White Sox' brilliant starting pitching corps, overpowered the normally hard hitting Tigers, who went into the twin bill in a first place tie with Minnesota.

The 6-foot, 175-pound right-hander permitted only two balls to be hit out of the infield and allowed the Tigers just two base runners—on a hit batsman and error—in rolling to his 15th victory and recording the fourth no-hitter in the majors this season.

After retiring the first six Detroit hitters in order, Horlen hit Bill Freehan with a pitch to open the third. Freehan moved around to third on the two infield outs but was stranded when Dick McAuliffe fled to center.

Third baseman Ken Boyer booted Ed Mathews' leadoff grounder in the fifth, but Jim Northrup bounced into a double play and Horlen set down the last 13 Tigers in succession to nail the first no-hitter for a White Sox pitcher in 10 years.

Second baseman Wayne Causey raced behind the bag to glove Jerry Lumpe's leadoff grounder in the ninth and threw him out on a close play, the Tigers' bench disputing the call.

Bill Heath then grounded to third baseman Don Buford, who grabbed the ball on the short hop and nailed Heath for the second out. Dick McAuliffe was the last man before Horlen.

He left after giving up three singles that scored one run. Two more came home on Roberto Clemente's double off reliever Jack Lamabe.

Horlen, a lean Texan, struck out four and needed one other extra effort from his defense when Causey made a leaping grab of Al Kalne's liner in the fourth. The Tigers hit 18 ground balls to the Chicago infield.

The White Sox, who had blown a three-run lead in the ninth inning Saturday in bowing to Detroit 7-3, drove right-hander Joe Sparrano from the mound in a five-run first inning burst and breezed the rest of the way.

Causey's two-run triple was the big blow, and Horlen capped the rally with a run-scoring single.

The no-hitter was the third in the American League this year—and the second against the Tigers.

The last no-hitter for the White Sox was pitched by Bob Keegan against Washington on Aug. 20, 1957.

Carlos, a 26-year-old right-hander making his fourth start since being promoted from the minors 2½ weeks ago, registered his first major league victory in the nightcap.

Twins-Orioles
BALTIMORE (AP) — Dave Boswell pitched a five-hitter and Minnesota took sole possession of first place in the American League yesterday with a 4-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

The triumph, combined with Chicago's victory over Detroit in the first game of a doubleheader, enabled the Twins to take the lead in the four-team scramble.

Minnesota snapped a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning, scoring the lead run on Brooks Robinson's error. Zoilo Versalles opened the seventh with a double and was on third with two out when Robinson booted Harmon Killebrew's grounder.

The Twins added another run in the eighth when Bob Allison singled, reached to third on Luis Aparicio's error and scored on Rich Reese's pinch double.

Three of the hits off Boswell, '30 came in the fourth inning when the Orioles scored but their runs, Russ Snyder opened with a single and Paul Blair walked. Then singles by Frank Robinson and Brooks Robinson drove in the runs. But Boswell escaped without further damage.

Hot-hitting Tony Oliva drove in the Twins' first two runs. He tripped Killebrew across in the sixth and drove in Minnesota's first run in the first with a ground ball after Jim Palmer walked the first two batters and they advanced on a wild pitch.

Pirates-Cards
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Maury Wills tripled home two runs and scored the winning run for the Pittsburgh Pirates in the eighth inning yesterday as the Pirates edged the National League leading St. Louis Cardinals 8-7.

Manny Jimenez's pinch-hit ground ball off relief pitcher Ron Willis scored Wills after the little third baseman had batted in runners from second and first with his triple to center.

Earlier in the inning, Manny Mota's pinch single scored Jose Pagan, who had doubled and held second on Jerry May's infield single.

The Cards got four runs in the second on six straight singles—four off starting pitcher Woody Fryman and two off reliever John Elner.

The Pirates scored a run in the third and tied the game with three more in the fourth when following Monday and was won by the Oilers, 39-20 as "Joltin' Jim" Shaughnessy, Oil City's peerless back, romped for five touchdowns. Ironically, Hanna had called off the game with Oil City at Corry earlier in the 1964 season for the same reason—rain—but the Oilers, who had already made the trip, returned the following week to defeat the Beavers.

Boswell pitched a five-inning no-hitter and Minnesota took sole possession of first place in the American League yesterday with a 4-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

The triumph, combined with Chicago's victory over Detroit in the first game of a double-header, enabled the Twins to take the lead in the four-team scramble.

Minnesota snapped a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning, scoring the lead run on Brooks Robinson's error. Zolfo Versalles opened the seventh with a double and was on third with two out when Robinson booted Harmon Killebrew's grounder.

The Twins added another run in the eighth when Bob Allison singled, raced to third on Luis Aparicio's error and scored on Rich Reese's pinch double.

Three of the hits off Boswell, 13-10, came in the fourth inning when the Orioles scored both their runs. Russ Snyder opened with a single and Paul Blair walked. Then singles by Frank Robinson and Brooks Robinson drove in the runs. But Boswell escaped without further damage.

Hot-hitting Tony Oliva drove in the Twins' first two runs. He tripled Killebrew across in the sixth and drove in Minnesota's first run in the first with a ground ball after Jim Palmer walked the first two batters and they advanced on a wild pitch.

Pirates-Cardinals

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Maury Willis tripled home two runs and scored the winning run for the Pittsburgh Pirates in the eighth inning yesterday as the Pirates edged the National League leading St. Louis Cardinals 8-7.

Manny Jimenez's pinch-hit ground ball off relief pitcher Ron Willis scored Willis after the little third baseman had batted in runners from second and first with his triple to center.

Earlier in the inning, Manny Mota's pinch single scored Jose Pagan, who had doubled and held second on Jerry May's infield single.

The Cards got four runs in the second on six straight singles—four off starting pitcher Woody Fryman and two off reliever John Gelnar.

The Pirates scored a run in the third and tied the game with three more in the fourth when Yastrzemski, a double by Scott and Harrelson's infield out.

Bell worked his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the third and the Red Sox hiked the count to 4-1 with a pair of runs in the fourth.

Boston clobbered Jim Bouton, who relieved starter Al Downing in the fifth, for five runs in the sixth.

Harrelson launched the big rally with a single and retired for a pinch-runner. A double by Rico Petrocelli and a walk set up Ryan's three-base hit down the left field line. Andrews doubled home Ryan and later scored himself on a two-bagger by Scott.

Senators-Angels

WASHINGTON (AP)—Paul Casanova's bases-loaded single—the fifth hit of the inning—drove in the winning run as Washington rallied for three runs in the ninth inning and a 3-2 victory over California yesterday.

George Brunet was working on a four-hitter and had the Senators shut out until the ninth. But Tim Cullen opened with a single and Ken McMullen beat out an infield hit. Minnie Rojas relieved and Frank Howard and Cap Peterson followed with run-scoring hits, tying the score.

After Hank Allen was purposely walked, Casanova delivered his winning hit.

The Angels carried a 2-0 lead into the bottom of the ninth.

Pinch hitter Jay Johnstone had lined a home run breaking a scoreless tie in the eighth and then, with two out in the ninth, Roger Repoz walked and scored all the way from first on Rick Relchard's double.

Reds-Mets

NEW YORK (AP)—Lee May cracked a two-run homer and Jim Maloney, with late-inning help from Ted Abernathy, pitched Cincinnati to a 5-2 victory over the New York Mets yesterday.

May's fourth inning shot—the first hit off Tug McGraw—followed a walk to Vada Pinson and wiped out a 2-0 New York lead.

The Reds broke the tie in the next inning when Tommy Helms singled and reached second on Ron Swoboda's error. Leo Cardenas singled Helms home and

Phils-Braves

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Cokie Rojas' first career grand slam and three hits by Tony Gonzalez helped the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Atlanta Braves 10-5 yesterday for a sweep of their three games series.

Rojas, who also had a double, connected in the seventh off Braves' reliever Cecil Upshaw after John Briggs, John Callison and Gonzalez singled for one run, and Bill White walked to load the bases.

Jim Bunning earned his 17th victory with late-inning relief help from Dick Farrell. Bunning in seven innings had eight strikeouts which gave him 2,538 for his career and enabled him to pass Robin Roberts for eighth place on the all-time strikeout list.

The Phillies built a 5-0 lead after six innings. Atlanta scored three in the seventh—two on a single by Joe Torre and Clete Boyer's 24th home run.

Dodgers.

Ron Fairly's tie breaking gle keyed a four-run seventh inning rally that gave the Dodgers a 4-1 victory in the game.

Wynn greeted Bob Miller, third Los Angeles pitcher, his 36th homer—tops in National League—to break scoreless deadlock in the ninth cap. Dave Eilers, working relief of Bo Belinsky, was winner.

Belinsky held the Dodgers hitless until Jim Campanis singled with two out in the fourth and allowed only two more before he was lifted for a pitcher in the 10th.

Jim Brewer, the Dodgers starter, checked the Astros for three hits until the eighth, he gave way to Ron Perrano.

Rookie Bill Singer, worked eight innings, and ranoski combined for a fourth in the opener as the Dodgers overcame a 1-0 deficit with a seventh inning flurry.

JILL O'HARA

Warren Girl Has Role In New York Musical

A Warren girl, Jill O'Hara, has a leading role in a new musical production in New York City.

The musical "Hair," will run for eight weeks, from October 17 through December 10. It is the first of four productions scheduled for the first season at the indoor New York Shakespeare Festival Public Theater in Greenwich Village. The four productions will be unusual plays by contemporary writers.

The plays are produced by Joseph Papp. "After thirteen years of presenting free Shakespeare to millions, the New York Shakespeare Festival Public Theater in Greenwich Village moves into year-round production of contemporary plays at its own permanent home," Papp announces. "We turn to contemporary drama, not out of a surfeit of Shakespeare, but out of deep commitment to the cultural life of the city, and the drive to fulfill a meaningful role in society. This new phase of development stems from the challenge posed by new audiences we have created, and the need to give dramatic expression to the thinking of this time," he adds.

It is hoped to extend the summer inspiration of the New York Shakespeare Festival

Public Theater into a year-round creative search for the immediate and significant of today, states the advance announcement.

Book and lyrics of "Hair" are by Gerome Ragni and James Rado. Music is by Galt MacDermot. Director is Gerald Freedman. The musical is choreographed by Anna Sokolow. It is described as: "An American tribal love-rock musical."

Mrs. Edith O'Hara, who returned Tuesday from a ten-day visit in New York with her children, reports that David Merrick, Broadway producer, has an option on the production.

Jill O'Hara has been most successful in folk-singing engagements in New York. She has more recently been in an off-Broadway play: "Hang Down Your Head and Die." She has also appeared in a number of television productions.

Party O'Hara, Jill's sister, known professionally as "Jennie" O'Hara, had a role in a recent television series.

Jack O'Hara, a brother, who plays base guitar with the well-known David Blue Band and folk singers, will go with the group to California during September at which time they will make a series of recordings.

Reports From Red China Indicate Spreading Violence

By TILLMAN DURDIN

(C) N.Y. Times News Service HONG KONG—Reports from Communist China indicate spreading violence and disorder in the political struggle growing out of Mao Tse-tung's cultural revolution.

The current issue of China News Analysis, a widely read and respected weekly report published here on events in Communist China, describes the past month as "bloody August" on the basis of radio reports of fights, intrigues and demonstrations from various provincial centers.

Turbulent conditions in Kwangtung have received most attention here because Hong Kong borders that big southern province.

Aside from Kwangtung, where rival groups in Canton clashed, Kweichow, in southwestern China, has experienced particularly violent disarray.

The Maoist-controlled province administration in Kweichow, which is called a revolutionary committee, has been stubbornly challenged by an anti-Maoist faction. The radio charges this group with mobilizing a widespread counter-revolutionary movement against the ruling committee.

A Kweichow radio broadcast Aug. 24 reported that "misled masses" organized by the anti-Maoist faction had indulged in "beating, smashing, looting, arson, killing, deliberately instigating struggle by violence" and general sabotage of revolutionary aims.

At one point, the radio reported on Aug. 23, the dissidents got control of the buses in the Kweichow Transport Service.

The radio indicated that the buses were regained after a clash that "crushed the frenzied attack of class enemies, smashing their criminal plot." The radio said that 34 buses, duly decorated with portraits of Mao, were repaired and restored to

Scientists Astounded Over Astrobug Project

By HARRY MOSKOS

HONOLULU (AP) — Enthusiastic scientists report they are astounded, excited and elated over the result of America's "astrobug" satellite experiment.

"The fact is the whole thing is unbelievable," said Dr. Samuel P. Johnson in describing the success of the biosatellite 2 "bring-em-back-alive" space flight.

Dr. Johnson, affiliated with North American Aviation, was involved with one of the two experiments which had immediate reports of "astounding" success.

The biosatellite 2 space capsule was snared in the air Saturday high over the Pacific Ocean some 1,000 miles south of Honolulu by an Air Force plane to end a 45-hour ride through space.

The capsule, rushed to temporary laboratories at Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu, contained 13 experiments. Two of the tests-dealing with pepper plants and wheat seedlings—were overwhelming successes on initial inspection while it will be several weeks before the results of the other experiments are fully known.

But favorable results are expected from the other tests, too, as indicated by Dr. R.W. Price of Colorado State University who said experiments involving amoebae and paramecia had results "far exceeding our fondest wishes."

Johnson termed the results of an experiment dealing with the liminal angle of a plant under weightlessness as dramatic. He explained that in his experiment all the leaves of the pepper plants folded down while under normal conditions the leaves would face upward.

"Essentially the thing was a complete success," he said. "All the leaves folded down. When you opened the package you could just visualize that this thing worked in space. We now have evidence that gravity really controls the orientation of a plant."

Also elated with the success of their experiment was a team working with wheat seedlings.

Dr. C.J. Lyon of Dartmouth College said "no plants have ever been grown before without the effects of gravity."

"Our wheat seeds did germinate and made as much growth as could be expected in two days."

"The root sprouts appear to be normal in form but they grew in directions quite unlike those to be found in seedlings planted on earth," he added.

Dr. Lyon said normally a root system goes downward. "Not always straight down, but generally down."

He said "In this case the roots did not grow as in earth. They were curved back up toward the sprout."

"We saw plenty of roots going to the sides," he said. "They grew in a direction quite unlike those you normally get in the soil."

Reader Asks Ban of Miniskirt

BELGRADE (AP) — A Yugoslav newspaper reader claims miniskirts cause rheumatism, are harmful for the economy and morality and should be banned by law.

The protest against the short-skirt fad that has swept this country as it has others was published this weekend in the weekly magazine Svet. The World-of-Belgrade.

It was signed by a woman who described herself as a "Defender of morality," from Prijepele, a central Yugoslav town.

In her four-point explanation, she wrote that men in the streets "gaze at the skin above the knees," of miniskirt wearers, and continue thinking of this while at work.

This causes lower productivity, their wages drop, which in turn causes stagnation of economy, she added.

The fashion also jeopardizes the textile industry and in a few years social insurance will suffer, after the number of rheumatic patients increases because of bared knees and thighs.

"The miniskirt further unavoidably causes a lowering of morality, which also means an increase in the number of illegitimate children," the woman asserted. "Who is going to take care of the babies found on park benches with a note tucked in?"

"Defender of morality" also proposed a 98-article law for banning miniskirts, precisely defining the miniskirt and offenders, and covering seamstresses, fathers and husbands.

LONDON (AP) — Miniskirts win again. Patrick Gordon Walker, the new education minister, said Saturday girls returning to school in Britain this fall will not be forbidden to wear miniskirts as long as school heads approve.

Gordon Walker, 60, and a father of three grown daughters, said he had no intention of copying French Education Minister Alain Peyrefitte's recent ban on short skirts in school.

"Although, mind you, they look better on young girls than on older women. I think one has to adapt oneself to these changes."

"If a girl can wear the 'mini' at home, why shouldn't she wear it at school? I can see no harm in it at all."

British schoolgirls traditionally wear uniforms to classes. School heads dictate the dress, and most seem to allow short skirts.

As one headmistress said, "We rely on the good sense and good taste of the girls."

Scranton Won't Head Convention

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — Former Gov. William W. Scranton says he will not accept the presidency of the upcoming state constitutional convention.

Scranton, a nominee for a delegate's seat from Lackawanna County, said in an interview Saturday, he felt "the president should be a person presently involved in state government or one who will be involved in the near future."

Asked whether his seeking a delegate's seat wasn't aspiring to public office, something he said he never again would do, Scranton replied:

"When I made that statement in May of 1966 I said it did not include becoming a delegate to a convention. This convention post would be a temporary, three-month term, a civic duty. I have not changed my mind about running for public office."

service after the bus depot had been recaptured.

The Kweichow radio also reported Aug. 23 that "the handful of party officeholders taking the capitalist road" had spread rumors that worsened relations between the army and the people and "in broad daylight slandered, beat up and even cruelly suppressed and persecuted heroic people's liberation army fighters."

The radio added that one soldier had been murdered.

China news analysis cited a radio broadcast on Aug. 31 from Kianasi, a province in South Central China, reporting a call from a provincial military agency to the people to stop sabotaging production and to return to work.

Weapons and other military supplies held by organizations should be handed over to higher authorities, the broadcast said.

Firemen Hold Annual Field Day

WARREN TIMES-MIRROR AND OBSERVER

WARREN, PA., MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1967

ENGINE RUNS ENGINE

"The engine that runs the engine" was one of the main topics of conversation at yesterday's fireman's field day. Here Don McCaslin of Corry exchanges points of view with Bernard Porter of Spring Creek and Milton York of Sugar Grove.

Firemen from throughout Warren County met yesterday at Youngsville's Island Park for a field day. The activities began at 1 p.m. with a demonstration of methods of controlling fires that may occur on gas lines, in the demonstration, provided through the cooperation of the United Natural Gas Co. and Columbia Gas Co., a high pressure line was used for four types of fires resulting from a broken flange, broken line underground, stand pipe and a broken line in a bell hole.

Much of the remainder of the day was devoted to classroom activities with discussions and educational information ranging from hydraulics to the use and function of protective masks. There was a discussion of methods used in the detection of fires and information on arson fires. Pennsylvania State Police offered a special school for fire police.

The day gave area fire departments a chance to compare notes on fire fighting methods, display and compare equipment, and to bring themselves up to date on new fire fighting methods. The day ended with a chicken barbecue provided by the Starbrick Fire Department. The committee for the field day consisted of Scott Stuart, chairman, Erm Fitzgerald, Douglas Ward, Harley See and Donald Curtis.

531 Miles Of State Roads In County

(TMO Harrisburg Bureau)
HARRISBURG—Warren County motorists, perhaps to their surprise, have a total of 531 miles of state highway within the confines of their county over which to putt-putt in the family jitney.

This was learned yesterday by the Times Mirror and Observer in a check with the State Department of Highways on a just completed statewide highway tabulation covering state highway mileage as of July 1, the start of the current fiscal year.

Within the county the mileage, on a general basis, breaks down to 509 miles in Warren County's 22 second class township and 22 miles within the six boroughs in the county.

For the more fastidious or detail-preferring resident or motorist of the county, 86 miles will be found in federal aid primary-rural roads (83 miles in the county's townships, three miles in the boroughs) while the federal aid primary - urban mileage totals four miles in the county's boroughs.

Insofar as the secondary road system in the county is concerned, the total on the federal aid-rural front is 136 miles broken down into 131 miles in the townships, five miles in the county's boroughs.

The total mileage for the strictly state-subsidized (non-federal aid) roads in the county is 302 miles, of which total 291 miles are in the townships and 11 miles in the county's boroughs.

Committees Of YMCA Meet Sept. 14

The YMCA Youth Work Committee and Camp Committee will hold a joint meeting at the YMCA on Thursday, September 14, 1967 at 7:30 p.m., according to an announcement by Robert W. Newman, chairman.

After the combined meeting the Camp Committee will hold a separate meeting in order to review the report on this year's season of activities.

The Youth Work Committee will discuss in detail the Fall and Winter program.

This will be the last official meeting prior to Kenneth Hale assuming the position of Youth Work Director of the Roxborough Branch of the Philadelphia YMCA.

Members of the Youth Work Committee consist of Bruno Salerno, Boyd Zinger, Andrew Donick, Charles Chido, Joseph Helfrich, Mike Okruh, Jack Sharp and Julius Schultz.

The personnel of the Camp Committee include Andrew Donick, Chairman, Joseph Helfrich, Robert Peltz, Quentin Holt, Julius Schultz and Robert Newman.

Warehouse

Burns in Erie

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Fire destroyed a 300-foot long warehouse early yesterday, causing damage state police say was estimated at $75,000.

The cause of the fire at the Tanner Manufacturing Co. warehouse in suburban Lawrence Park was not immediately determined.

Six fire companies battled the flames.

WATER PUMPING DEMONSTRATION

Waiting to begin a water pumping demonstration Bill Strickland (left) stands at the controls of this pump truck with Chuck Morris and Don Aberg anticipating the signal to begin the demonstration. The truck used in the pumping demonstration belongs to the Youngsville Fire Department.

WALL OF WATER

Virtually a wall of water, this spray all but hides the many spectators at Island Park yesterday as firemen from throughout the county met for a day of demonstrations and classroom activities. This particular demonstration was to show the use and effect of a spray of water to prevent the spread of a fire.

Boro Council To Consider 5 Ordinances

Warren borough council tonight will consider five ordinances up for second reading.

One ordinance is in regard to stop signs at Sixth ave. and East st., an intersection where a number of traffic accidents have occurred. Also stop signs at Walnut and Eddy sts.

Council views and ordinance to provide for alternate parking on Liberty and Franklin sts. as well as one creating parking meter zones in parking lots, the new section in the rear of the Exchange Hotel and the one adjacent to the municipal building.

Other ordinances scheduled for second reading deal with regulating distribution of handbills, prohibiting false reports for police services and prohibiting setting of fires through carelessness.

First reading ordinances on the agenda would prohibit parking on the south side of Pennsylvania ave. east from Russell st. to Glade bridge and providing stop signs at Hill and Monroe sts.

Street paving bids will also be opened.

State's Unemployment Reported Down in August

Total unemployment in Pennsylvania declined in August, marking the first decrease since April, Secretary of Labor and Industry William J. Hart announced yesterday.

According to preliminary figures the number of jobless workers was estimated at 161,000 in mid-August, a drop of 39,000 from mid-July. The rate of unemployment also moved downward, from 4.1 per cent of the total civilian work force in mid-July to 3.3 per cent in August. Both the number and the rate represented the second lowest of any August on record. They were topped only by August 1966 when total unemployment was estimated at 150,000 and 3.1 per cent of the work force. The lowest level of any month was reached last October when the unemployment totaled 121,000 and the rate, 2.5 per cent.

Secretary Hart attributed the reduction to employment gains in manufacturing, construction and trade and to a fall off in the number of new entrants and reentrants to the work force.

The national unadjusted rate of unemployment in August was 3.7 percent and the seasonally adjusted rate, 3.8 per cent.

Continued claims for unemployment compensation decreased while initial claims increased during the week ended September 1, according to Jack B. Brown, executive director, Bureau of Employment Security. Brown pointed out that the current week's continued claims volume is the smallest weekly continued claims volume to date during 1967.

The 59,974 continued claims filed represented a decrease of 2,069 from the volume of one week ago but an increase of 15,711 over the number filed in the same week one year ago. The decrease was scattered with no concentration in any particular industry.

Initial claims filed totaled 12,135 or 1,250 more than the number filed in the preceding week. Temporary layoffs in apparel, stone-clay-glass and electrical machinery accounted for most of the current increase in the initial claims volume.

During the week 53,262 UC checks amounting to $1,742,394 were issued to regular UC claimants.

Robert M. Kinney, administrator, Warren General Hospital, has been appointed a preceptor in the Health Services Administrators Development Program conducted by the University of Alabama in Birmingham's Center for Hospital Continuing Education. The student for whom Kinney will have preceptorial responsibility is Thomas J. McFarland, administrator, Port Allegany Community Hospital, Port Allegany.

It consists of the initial two week session in residence, an interim 10 month home study program and a final two week session in residence in the summer of 1968.

This year's in-residence session was held at Ann Jordan Lodge, conference center of the University of Alabama. The class consisted of 19 students from the states of Alabama, Florida, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

Richard G. Allen is director of the Center for Hospital Continuing Education.

IT'S FUN FAIR TIME AGAIN! This Saturday, September 16th, the Russell-Fine Grove PTA is sponsoring a FUN FAIR at Werner Park, south of Russell on Route 62. There's something for everyone—a duck pond, clown game, nickel pitch, ring-a-bottle, hoop-a-la, cane game, a white elephant booth, and, a fair isn't a fair, without the popular "Pocket Lady". Good food isn't being overlooked either—there is to be a kitchen booth featuring meatball sandwiches, hotdogs, home-made pies, pop and coffee—Mrs. Don Andersen, general chairman, has for her assistants members of the Knitting Club, and all officers of the PTA will be there to welcome you and see that you have a wonderful time.—Oh, there's also a magnificent Teddy Bear looking for a new home. He's been donated by Frank Russo and may be seen on display this week at area stores, and on Thursday between the hours of 1 and 3 at the Jamesway Store. For more information call Don Andersen 757-4566, or Herbert Swanson at 757-4535. In case of rain on Saturday, the fair will be postponed until Saturday, September 23rd.

THE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY of their wedding will be observed this coming Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Johnson of Tidouate. On that day, September 17th, from 2 to 5 p.m., an open reception will be held at Mountain Grange Hall in Tidouate. This November the orchestra, under the baton of Carl Stout—who also directs the civic chorus—will play the accompaniment for the civic chorus's presentation of Mozart's "Requiem". All who can play an instrument (strings are particularly needed) are invited to attend this first practice of the season at 7:30 p.m. in the Warren Area High School band room.

THE PLEASANT TOWNSHIP PTA, meeting this evening at 7 p.m., will hear a special speaker—the young guest is Karl Rahner, Foreign Exchange Student from Jordan. Refreshments will be served by members of the executive committee, who are asked to give their money to Mrs. Virgil Kitterer, or Mrs. Sheldon Stewart, hospitality co-chairmen. There will be no room visitation at this first meeting.

VISITING THE JACK LARKINS at their home on Beech street, are Mrs. Otto Larkins of Terre Haute, Ind., Mr. Larkins's mother, and two sisters, Mrs. Don Franklin, also of Terre Haute, and Mrs. Wayne Stevens of Montpelier, Ind. The three arrived last week and are much impressed with the superb scenery in this corner of Pennsylvania and the friendly atmosphere of the community.

Today is the final day to make known your YWCA classes preference. If you haven't answered your questionnaire yet, phone in your reply. What you desire will have an effect on classes offered this fall by the Y.

The Pre-School Mothers Club of Warren is having a tureen dinner at the home of Mrs. Robert Blume, 209 S. Main street, Clarendon, at 6 this evening.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: For many years I tried to persuade my wife to come to Europe with me. She felt she could not keep up with the pace of a guided tour and since that was the only way I would go, I decided to make the trip alone.

I was gone 21 days and had a wonderful time. There were several couples on the tour who were my age (past 60) and many interesting widows. One widow in particular was extremely pleasant and we often sat together on the planes and buses and enjoyed one another's company.

A few days before we were to leave for home she telephoned my room (this was in Paris) and said she was having trouble closing her suitcase. She asked if I would help. I said "yes" and went to her room. After I closed the suitcase, we visited a few minutes. She remarked that it had been an exhausting day and she was sleepy and I wanted to take a nap. I said I was sleepy, too. She suggested I flop down on the other twin bed for awhile and I did.

We both dozed for about 40 minutes and then I left. When I told my wife about this harmless little incident, she flew into a rage. She insisted that I had committed adultery, that no decent woman would allow a man to sleep in her room and that no respectable man would have done such a thing. I did not do anything wrong and my conscience is clear. My wife has been very formal ever since and I am talked out. Please give me your opinion on whether or not I am guilty of adultery.—CONDEMNED

DEAR CONDEMNED: If all you did was take a nap in the widow's room you are not guilty of adultery. But you used very poor judgment, Dad. The next time you are hit with a sudden attack of drowsiness, don't lie down in a widow's hotel room. Dash some cold water on your face and drag yourself to your own quarters where you belong.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Others have aired their pet peeves in your column. May I? When the phone rings I always drop everything and answer it as soon as possible. Sometimes I am unable to get to the phone until the fourth or fifth ring. If the caller has hung up I get terribly upset wondering if I missed something important.

It is exasperating when one runs from the attic or the basement or the garden and then picks up the receiver and hears a dial tone.

Please tell your readers about the information which is printed in the front pages of the telephone directory. It says the phone will ring 10 times in the space of one minute. I believe as a matter of ordinary courtesy a caller ought to give a person 60 seconds to get to the phone. Will you kindly pass the word?—NOBODY THERE

DEAR N. T.: Here's your letter, and with it my pledge that in the future I will give the other party 10 rings before I hang up. I confess I didn't realize 10 rings was equivalent to 60 seconds. Thanks for telling me—and millions of others.

MR. AND MRS. GARY GALEK
(Ropp Studio)

Diane Lookenhouse Is Bride In Sugar Grove Nuptials

Diane Lookenhouse and Gary Galek exchanged marriage vows in a double ring ceremony on September 2, in the Sugar Grove Methodist Church. The Rev. T.E. Spofford officiated before a candlelight altar banked with palms and bouquets of mixed flowers.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Lookenhouse of Sugar Grove and the groom is the son of Mrs. Laura Galek of Wolcott, N.Y., and Mr. Henry Galek of Sodus, N.Y. Music for the one o'clock service was provided by Jean and Nancy Sorenson, and Mrs. Darwin Curtis, organist.

The bride approached the altar gowning in a long bridal dress styled with a delicate lace molded bodice with appliques of the lace adorning the slim skirt and sweeping train. Crystals highlighted the pearl etched crown which secured her veil of silk illusion and she carried a bouquet of carnations with a corsage center.

As matron of honor, Mrs. Gail Kunselman wore an empire style floor length gown of blue crepe and satin with matching headbow. Her flowers were white carnations tipped in blue. Miss Barbara Galek, sister of the groom, and Christine Lupo were the bridesmaids gowning in gold crepe and satin with matching headbows. Their flowers were white carnations tipped in gold.

Victor Galek, brother of the groom, was the best man. Guests were seated by Ronald Lookenhouse, brother of the bride, and Bruce Galek, brother of the groom. The ringbearer was Larry Lookenhouse, brother of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hurst had charge of ceremonies at the reception which followed in the church parlor with two hundred attending.

Aides were Martha Chapman, Nina Chapman, Dora Devore, Sonya Chapman, Mary Jane Hinsdale, Karen Hurst, Susan Hannold had charge of the guest book.

After a honeymoon in Niagara Falls, N.Y., the newlyweds are residing in Rochester, N.Y., where the new Mrs. Galek, a 1967 graduate of Leavenworth Central High School, will attend Victor Better Business School, and Mr. Galek, also a 1967 graduate of the same high school, will attend Monroe Community College.

A New You by Emily Wilkens

Silver Standards

DEAR EMILY WILKENS:

SILVER STANDARDS

I'm always ill at ease when I am invited out for dining, especially when I see a long display of utensils. Where is the proper place to begin and what do you use for what?
Gloria G.

That array of silver may seem confusing to you at first glance—but it isn't. In fact, nothing could be more logical than the table setting for a formal dinner. It's all arranged in order of use and all you have to do is remember to start with the piece farthest from the plate and work in toward the plate.

If you do pick up the wrong fork by mistake, use it without attracting attention.

At a party, take your cue from the hostess. After all, it's not proper to start eating before she does anyway. If you follow her, your dining difficulties will be tabled.

LUSH LASHES

When and where are false eyelashes appropriate, and what is the best way to clean them?

Barbara L.

If you really enjoy wearing them, false eyelashes are right for formal dances and special parties, wrong for school, shopping, daytime doings.

The most important how-to tip is to care for your lashes each time you use them. Don't let glue and mascara build up on them.

Clean lashes with either a solvent or dip them in lukewarm water and remove excess glue with a small brush. Then lay them flat on tissue, roll up the tissue with a pencil and secure with an elastic band. Your lush lashes will come out clean and curly for your next gala.

DO OR DILET

All my life I've been on one kind of diet or another. Although everybody tells me how great I look when I've lost some weight, I know I feel my best when I'm wearing a few extra pounds. Is it really so terrible to be on the heavy and lazy side?
Vickie G.

Doctors agree that some people are actually happier with a little extra padding. Somehow this helps them cope with problems and seems to keep their psychological equilibrium balanced.

Others claim they feel protected by poundage. They rationalize that if you're heavier you have a right to be lazier.

In any case, do talk this over with your doctor. You might be the exception to the be-thinner, feel-better theory.

WIDE-EYED WISDOM

My eyes are set very close together. And no matter which eye makeup I try, all I seem to do is emphasize their closeness. Is there anything I can do to make me look more wide-eyed?
Barbara S.

Cheer up. You can use some artful artifice to put the focus where it should be—on wide-apartness.

First, put white or light shadow on each side of the bridge of your nose near the corner of your eyes. This immediately gives the illusion of width.

When you apply your liner, don't start at the point where your eyes actually begin; start a little further away from your nose. Extend your liner a bit beyond the end of your eyelids and carry through by making your eyebrows extend toward your temples as well.

Check to be sure that your brows start parallel with the inner corner of your eye.

This routine should make you wide-eyed and bright-eyed, too.

SALT SHAKER

My tight budget doesn't permit special body lotions and creams. As I belong to a swim club, I would like my skin to look smooth when I wear a bathing suit. Do you know of an inexpensive all-over body smoother?

Wendy D.

After your bath, while your skin is still damp, rub handfuls of fine table salt over your whole body and massage it in well. Then stand under a warm-to-cool shower.

Your skin will have an all-over glow that should make you the splash hit of the swim set!

Lohnes-Neidig Wedding Vows Pledged In Saron Lutheran

The Saron Lutheran Church, Youngsville, was the setting for the exchange of marriage vows by Darlene Kay Lohnes and Budd Franklin Neidig recently.

The Rev. James P. Dorow, pastor, officiated at the double ring rites.

Wedding music was provided at the organ by Miss Lillian Swanson and vocal solos by Louis Mineweiser. Altar decorations included daisies and browned Susans 'n' vases. The family pews were marked with satin bows.

Escorted on the arm of her father, the bride wore a gown of home-spun linen and imported Venetian lace. The gown was styled with an a-line skirt and the bodice had a bateau neckline with collar and short sleeves of the lace. The gracefully sweeping train was also lace. Her fingertip bouffant veil was secured by a petal shaped headress and she carried daisy pompons surrounded by brown-eyed Susans.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Donna Higley of Erie, was in a long dress of mint green dotted Swiss with a circular daisy headress. Her flowers formed a daisy fan. Gowned similarly were the bridesmaids, Miss Judy Brewster of Russell and Miss Becky Beedle of Chancellors Valley, both in yellow and carrying brown-eyed Susans.

The flower girl, Mistress Jacqueline Snyder of Hanover, Penna., a cousin of the groom, was in a frock of brown dotted Swiss, with a circular daisy headress and carried a basket of daisies and brown-eyed Susans.

The best man was Jeffery Bolling of Pittsburgh, and ushers were David Boyer of Trackville, Fenton Lohnes of Warren, brother of the bride, Master Bryan Lohnes, brother of the bride, was the ringbearer.

The mother of the bride wore a blue silk with lace coat ensemble, with white hat and a daisy corsage. The mother of the groom chose beige silk with lace, beige accessories and a daisy corsage. Mrs. Mabel Gilbert and Mrs. Leon Epler, Overseas commercial telephone service began in 1927 when Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York called the Lord Mayor of London. A radio-telephone call cost $75 then, and was punctuated by static. Today, a virtually noise-free call from New York to London may cost only $5.70.

grandmothers, were remembered with corsages of brown-eyed Susans.

The reception was held in the church basement with two hundred and fifty guests attending. Decorations were carried out in yellow and green crepe paper streamers, bell clusters and daisy baskets adorned the bride's table. Master and mistress of ceremonies were Mr. and Mrs. Chester Wares of Kennedy, N.Y., and aides were Miss Carol Toppa, Joyce Andrew, Janet Crouser, Janice Snyder, and Kristin Haddon managed the guest book.

For traveling to Canada, the bride wore a mint green dress with Venetian lace overlay and white accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Neidig will be residing at 323 Franklin street, Slippery Rock, on weekdays, and on weekends at RD 1, Bear Lake.

The groom, a 1964 graduate of Eisenhower high school, is now a senior at Slippery Rock State College; the bride, a 1965 graduate of Eisenhower High School, attended Erie Business Center. Both are employed at Rustic Restaurant and Country Store.

Pre-nuptial affairs were given by Miss Judy Brewster, Mrs. Connie Nelson, Mrs. Brenda Lauffenburger, Mrs. Shirley Lohnes. The rehearsal dinner was given at the Rustic Restaurant, by the parents of the groom.

Guests from out of town attended from Erie, Pittsburgh, Franklin, Oil City, Sandy Lake, Corry, Northumberland, Pa., Jamestown, Cherry Creek, Kennedy, Dunkirk, Bemus Point, New York City, Hanover, and Randolph, N.Y.

Hints From Heloise

GLASSES FOR PARTIES

DEAR HELOISE:
Here's a tip if you are having a party and want to serve cold drinks in fancy frosted glasses.
Fill the glasses with hot water from the faucet then pour it out and quickly put the glasses in the freezer for at least thirty minutes before using.
When you take them out they will frost up and make the drinks look cool and refreshing.
Patty
Have you ever tried frosting the edge of the glass? All you need is a thin paste of powdered sugar and lemon juice in a shallow bowl. Turn each glass upside down, twist the edge in the paste and then freeze.
This will make a delicious frosty lemon ring all around the edge of your glass that will last until that tall glass of tea or lemonade is all gone.
Try lime and concentrated orange juice, too.
Sure makes your guests think you've gone to a lot of trouble, and it only takes a minute.
Heloise
DEAR HELOISE:
Men who have their shirts done up by the laundry often run into the problem of which shirt has long or short sleeves or French cuffs. They hate having to tear the shirt out of the plastic bag to check the sleeves, especially when time is short.
Well I mark my shirts inside the collar with an indelible ballpoint pen using a Roman numeral I for short sleeved shirts, II for long sleeves and III to denote a shirt with French cuffs.
Thanks, Sir, for writing. Or you could just use the letter S for short, L for long and F for French. Bless you.
Heloise
DEAR HELOISE:
Do you dig through kitchen drawers looking for your measuring spoons, cups and spatula?
Why not just keep them in your car? The rising hot air in your car will keep them in a neat row in a container. Then all it takes is a quick look in the car to find them.
Shirley J. J.
DEAR HELOISE:
I had just washed my kitchen trash basket and was trying to think how I could keep it from doing this mean chore every day.
Then all at once I remembered that a coffee canister container was lined with plastic. So why couldn't I use those plastic dividers to line the trash basket?
After tying a small knot to close the neck opening, I placed the plastic divider bag neck down into the basket. Then I stretched the open bottom of the bag around the outer edge of the container. Next I placed a large canister bag into the basket. Perfect liner!
Since I've been doing this I have not had to wash my wastebasket nearly so often. If the plastic liner gets soiled during the week I dump it out with the trash and insert a new one. The basket is free of soil and doesn't have to be washed.
A minus: such bags are expensive. If you have a use it ladies garment bag, blow the canister plastic to stretch it in the bottom. It's a better protection to your trash basket.
Eleonor McCreary
And what a perfect trash basket liner. All for free, too! But let's all remember to keep those plastic bags out of reach of children.
Heloise
LETTER OF LAUGHTER
DEAR HELOISE:
You told us how to clean the bathtub with a room spray. We have time and energy to do it, but we don't stretch exercises that we would not have needed had we cleaned the tub the old-fashioned way.
Francis Brown
Heloise, I clean all my especially household items with the can press in to read it as a special permit.

DIAGNOSE FIRST

Q My back is very sore and my hands and hair are very dry. Would a change in diet help?

A Probably not. But wouldn't it be best to consult a doctor? He has diagnosed the condition he could then prescribe whatever treatment is necessary with more assurance of success. Otherwise, any attempt to correct the condition is just a shot in the dark.

HERNIA

Q Will exercise strengthen the stomach muscles and make a hernia go away?

A No. The weak point in the abdomen consists of oval openings in the muscle tissue — not muscle — and if this tissue does not respond to muscle exercise, a hernia will develop. A hernia is a protrusion of abdominal organs through a weak point in the muscle wall. With certain exceptions, hernias should be corrected surgically.

It is very important that hernias are correctly diagnosed. I do not necessarily recommend treatment of hernias. Remember, the treatment of hernias is the function of the doctor, not your physician.

Filling prescriptions is a professional and personal service which we provide in keeping with the highest standards of pharmacy.

(c. 1967 by The Chicago Tribune)
ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ
Q. 1—Neither vulnerable as South you hold
♠K43 ♥8652 ♦1094 ♣KQJ
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A—Three spades. Something must be done to compensate for the discouraging nature of your original response. Inasmuch as your high card values fit in so well with partner's hand and he has shown a distributional type of holding game prospects are bright and a mere return to two spades by you would be made quite

Q. 2—As South, vulnerable, you hold
♠743 ♥J109765 ♦43 ♣J7
Your partner opens with two hearts. What is your response?
A—Four hearts. The double raise is a demand bid. It is a specialized response which promises good trump support but no special high card strength. It denies possession of an ace king void or singleton

Q. 3—Both vulnerable as South you hold
♠A6 ♥QJ863 ♦A753 ♣A4
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ 1 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid?
A—Two diamonds. It is recommended that you make it clear here and now that this hand must be played at a game contract. Then will follow the process of determining the best contract. A mere bid of two hearts would not be forcing and a jump shift of three hearts would be placing too much emphasis on the heart suit

Q. 4—Both sides vulnerable as South you hold
♠107 ♥K106 ♦K754 ♣AJ103
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ 1 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid?
A—One no trump. You have enough high card strength to make a reopening take out double but such action is not recommended in view of partner's expected spade response. A bid of one no trump in this position shows a slightly better than average holding, not 16 to 18 points

Q. 5—Neither vulnerable as South you hold
♠AQ75 ♥J95 ♦AK962 ♣A4
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
Pass 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass 2 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A—Three spades. While you have the values to raise no trump, it won't do any harm to check up on the possibility that partner might have some four card spade holding he did not consider worth showing. If he does the hand figures to play a trick or two better at a suit make

Q. 6—As South, vulnerable, you hold
♠AQ7 ♥AQ982 ♦7 ♣AQ32
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A—Four spades. Despite the mild nature of partner's initial response prospects for slam are bright since the hands appear to fit well. If he has the king of hearts and king of clubs which seems likely from the bidding all he needs, in addition, is a second spade control which you can bid in the suit should ferret out

Q. 7—As South, vulnerable, you hold
♠A1072 ♥AKJ54 ♣A4J9
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass 3 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A—Pass. Despite the strong nature of the bidding there is no apparent fit present. Your hand counts to a great deal in a suit but, since partner was unable to give a raise, no trump appears to be the best spot. Since partner has about 13 or 14 points slam seems out of the question

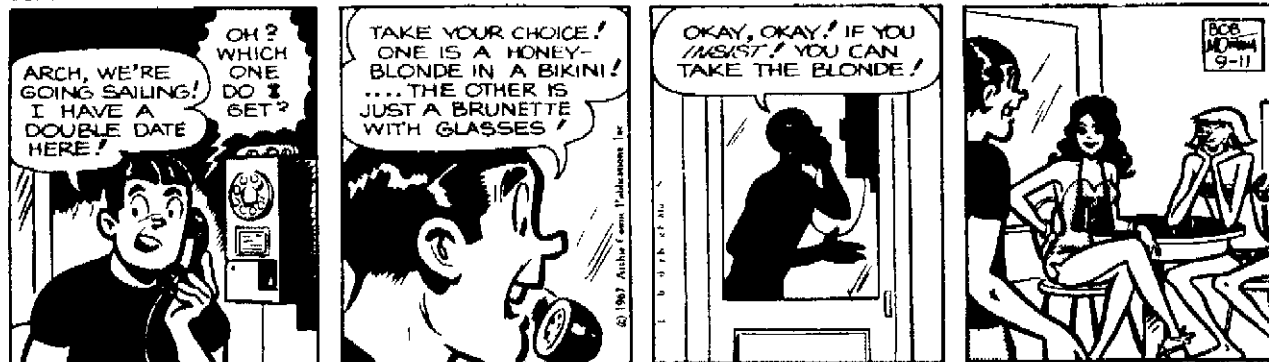

Q. 8—Neither vulnerable as South you hold
♠AQ7 ♥A98432 ♣K987
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
3 ♣ 3 ♦ 3 NT Pass ?

What do you bid?
A—Pass. While a game is very probably available to your side, it will be difficult at this level to satisfactorily explore for the best contract. We recommend that you settle for a sure profit which in view of your club holding, should prove quite substantial

Your Horoscope

By Frances Drake

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars, FOR MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1967.

ARIES (March 21 to April 20)—Start the new week with verve and at a steady pace. Investigate the validity of new offerings. Proper restraint in all matters is advised.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21)—You will now be in competition with top-flight people and their activities. You can hold your own, advance some. Good ideas and eloquent speech will help; also study and a calm, straightforward manner.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21)—You are one who can give a warmhearted assistant to a cold world. Others appreciate it, if silently. Day highly favors written matters, intellectual pursuits, artistic interests.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23)—Lunar aspects now encourage the formation of new devices, crafts. Co-operate with bright associates in stable ventures.

LEO (July 24 to August 23)—Be your sunny, wholesome self. Don't dissipate valued qualities or waste time. Reject propositions unworthy of your attention. See to it that your talents do not congeal through inactivity.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23)—The emphasis is now on choosing the correct project and issues on which to shower your handiwork. No day-dreaming! LIBRA (September 24 to October 23)—Domestic affairs, possibly a personal matter will need some attention. However, do not neglect daily chores or business matters, either. It may be a crowded day but you can handle it.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22)—Crush any desire to postpone things. NOW is the time. Strike while the time is propitious and the opposition is off balance. In your eagerness, don't swerve off onto a tangent—it would only cause delay.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21)—Jupiter auspicious. Be observing, mindful of future needs. Especially favored: Nurses, doctors, salespeople; those engaged in finance, teaching, the legal profession. CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20)—Saturn parallels Jupiter in benefic influence. Rouse yourself to that added effort which brings sweet compensation for extra-curricular work. Stay alert, aware.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19)—Day spells action, determination, aggressiveness. Good reasoning, astute planning advised. Bickering should be avoided.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20)—There's never a dull moment when you are at your best—and this is a day when you SHOULD be. There's plenty of planetary help for the honest, hopeful doer.

YOU BORN TODAY are affable, make friends readily, can carry your load profitably. This is a Zodiacal sector of actors, artists; business managers and industry builders, also. Your general aim is to improve, stimulate, throw an ever more brilliant light. FINE! If you do not get carried away with this enthusiasm. Quiet moments for reflection upon your methods, and talking things over pro and con with associates is essential for solid, lasting achievement. Things seldom go awry when the Virgoan's hand is steady and understanding. But when he points an accusing finger, bedlam can break loose. Birthdate of: James Thomson, poet; Wm. Sidney Porter (O. Henry), short story writer.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

VARICOSE VEIN PREVENTION

A Canadian woman wrote to us recently: "My mother and two aunts had varicose veins and now I think I have them. There are many bluish veins on my legs and on my feet. They do not bulge and are not painful but I suppose this is the next step. Can these be avoided? I'm only 45 years old and proud of my legs."

Don't count your chickens before they hatch. Even though varicose veins run in families, this does not mean that every member will inherit the weakness. After all, you may have acquired a set of tough veins from your father. Surface veins become more prominent after age 40. But there is a difference between a visible vein that is returning blood to the heart and a true varicose vein.

Varicose veins are enlarged vessels that look like worms under the skin. The normal vein contains a series of valves that close when the heart relaxes between beats to prevent the blood from dropping back into the legs.

In a defective vein, the walls stretch, the valves no longer meet in the center, and the blood flow usually goes in the wrong direction. This is mentioned because there is a difference between a prominent and a varicose vein.

Varicosities are difficult to prevent but there are numerous ways to lessen wear and tear on the veins and reduce the chance of developing the condition. Avoid standing or sitting in one place too long, especially at work, when watching TV, or riding in a plane, train, bus, or car. Get up, walk about, and stretch the legs. Elevate the feet when relaxing at home. Round garters or tight elastic girdles should not be worn for long periods of time.

TOMORROW: Prostate Cancer.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

CRIB DEATH

Mrs. R. writes: A 5-month-old baby was found dead in her crib. She had been sniffling slightly the day before. Is it possible for a fatal infection to develop so quickly?

REPLY: Yes, but in the majority of cases death is due to an overwhelming infection or allergy, owing to obstruction of the windpipe following the accumulation of tenacious mucus in the bronchi.

SPECIAL CHEMICAL

D.G. writes: What is the factor in the stomach that is responsible for the development of red blood cells?

REPLY: The stomach contains a chemical that is capable of extracting vitamin B12 from food. B12 is responsible for initiating the machinery that makes blood cells grow to maturity.

PAIN ON BENDING

S.G.R. writes: What causes pain in the head on bending over?

REPLY: This question would be easier to answer if you had not mentioned where the pain is located. Discomfort may come from sinus disease, arthritis of the neck vertebrae, tumor, or a disorder of the blood vessels.

DEGREES OF AGING

C.A. writes: How does senescence differ from senility?

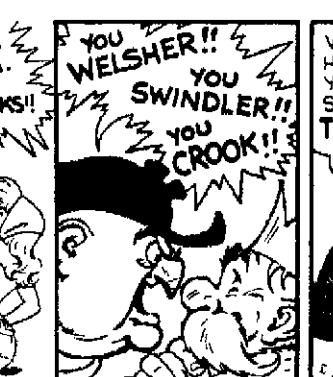

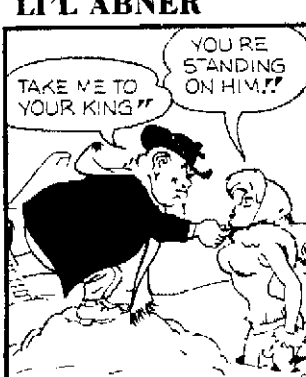

REPLY: Senescence is the process of growing old whereas senility is a mental infirmity of old age and is associated with feebleness.

"You know a good doctor for this?"

It's a question we answer all the time. Sometimes it's someone new in the neighborhood. Sometimes it's an old friend who just doesn't happen to have a family physician. The boy sprains an ankle... the baby runs a temperature... Grandma has a bad cough. Troubled people often turn to us for help, and rightly so. We work closely with physicians, providing the medicines they prescribe and use in their offices. We know who they are, their specialties, their office hours. In an emergency we're good people to ask. And we're always happy to be of service to our friends and patrons.

Unlisted Stocks And Amex Climb

By DOUGLAS W. CRAY

Trading on the over-the-counter market and the American Stock Exchange was moderate last week, but the stocks gave a good account of themselves on the price front.

Shaking off such economic setbacks as the strike at the Ford Motor Company, investors bid up prices rather steadily all week long on the Amex as well as over the counter.

Their interest once again was concentrated on the low-price issues that persistently top the most active trading lists on these exchanges.

One of the outstanding performers of the week on the over-the-counter market was Memorex, which added 17 points. Now priced over $200 a share, the stock has been a wider mover, up and down, for several months.

Beyond this and one or two other higher-priced issues, the traders churned around with a number of shares priced at $10 a share or less.

The National Quotation Bureau's index of 35 industrial stocks traded on the over-the-counter market reflected the steady but undramatic advance registered last week. The index closed on Friday at 335.19, up 3.80 from the close on the preceding Friday.

On the Amex, the index of stock prices also showed a gain for the week. It closed on Friday at 21.57, up 18 cents for the abbreviated trading week. Its high for the week was $21.78 and its low was $21.20.

Volume was described by most brokers as "moderate" on the over-the-counter market. On the American Stock Exchange, it amounted to 16,027,836. This compares with 16,675,485 traded the week before. Last week, all exchanges were closed on Monday in observance of the Labor Day holiday.

Among the over-the-counter issues, Electromagnetic Industries climbed 3 1/2 on brisk volume. The company reported a substantial jump in first-half earnings and received a favorable write-up in Barron's Magazine last week.

The Specialty Electronics Development Corporation moved ahead 1 1/2. The company is expected to report sharply increased profits for the year ended July 31.

A rise in the quarterly dividend and an increase in first-half profits helped move Tiffany's ahead 1 1/2.

The Yoo Hoo Chocolate Beverage Corporation added 1/4 on strong volume. Dr. Max Geller, president, last week told the St. Louis Society of Financial Analysts that the company should earn $1 a share in 1968. This year the company expects to net 30 cents a share.

The DeLur-Amsco Corporation advanced a point on news that it had applied for listing on the American Stock Exchange.

Other gainers on the industrial list were Acme Visible Records, up 8; Alcon Labs, up 3 1/2; Aai Corporation, up 5; Barden, up 4 1/2; Marriott, up 3 1/2; Corneliuss, up 4; Dravo, up 7 1/2; Elkhorn Coal, up 5; First Boston, up 10; Fluke, up 4; National Chemsearch, up 5 1/2; and Doyle Dane Bernbach, up 2 1/4.

Moving lower were Alpine Geophysical, down 3; Pinkerton, off 4; Wang, down 4 1/2; Wyandotte, down 3; Keuffel & Esser, off 2; and Rucker, down 2.

Trading was very light during the week in the insurance stocks and price movements were confined to a narrow range. In the life group, Connecticut General was down 1 1/2; Travelers was off 3/4; National Life was down 2 3/4; and Jefferson Standard was up 1 1/4.

Fire and casualty issues were also quiet. Connecticut Assurance was off 2 1/4 but St. Paul Fire added 2 1/2.

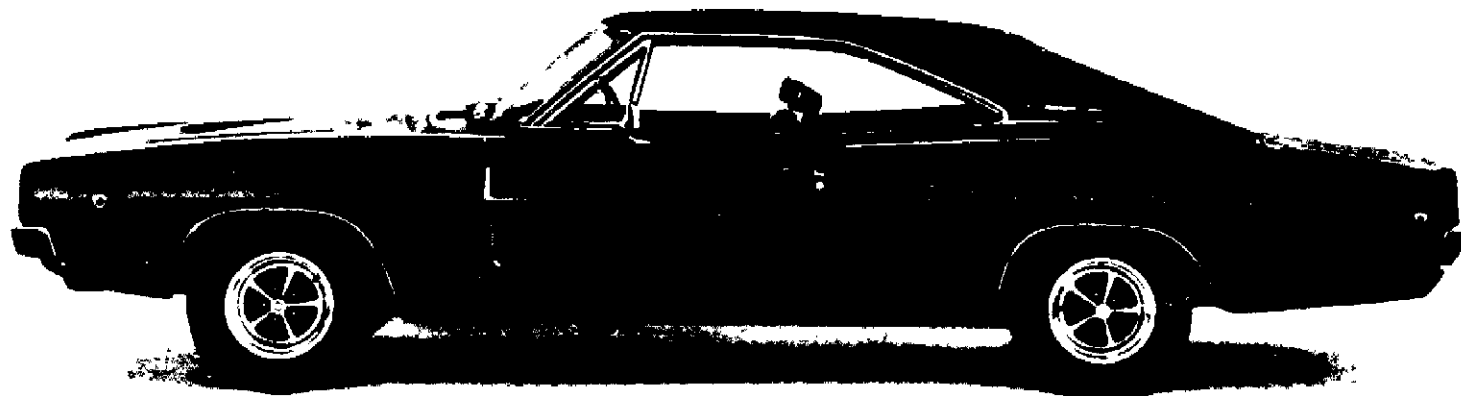

Bank shares were generally firm, with the New York banks showing the best gains. Their improvement was viewed as a reflection of the dividend increase announced during the week by First National City Bank.

Sperry Rand warrants were the most actively traded issue of the week on the Amex. The warrants closed at 14 1/2, down 2, on a volume of 474,800 shares.

Next on this busy list were Kin-Ark Oil and United Asbestos. They each traded 318,900 shares; Kin-Ark was up 1 at 5 1/2, and United Asbestos added 1 9/16 to 6 5/8.

THE WEEK IN FINANCE

Currents of Thought on Market Conflict

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY

"We're stockpiling money here at the moment and are being very careful about new commitments in the stock market. We're afraid the Federal Reserve will soon have to tighten the credit screws."

So spoke the manager of a big investment fund last week. His views represented one of the conflicting currents now coursing through stock market analyses.

A different stream of thought was evident in this comment from a major advisory service:

"Ready availability of investable funds and concern about inflation should keep demand for stocks strong."

Still another crosscurrent appeared in this assessment by a security analyst:

"The prospect of a tax increase, the extraordinarily large difference between bond yields and stock yields and the strong upward pressure of labor costs, are likely to act as restraining forces on the stock market, but downside risks for the market as a whole do not appear particularly worrisome."

Investors and traders, expecting livelier and more buoyant stock activity, flocked back to the market in greater numbers last week following the Labor Day holiday. They weren't disappointed.

The trading pace picked up somewhat from the recent apathetic trend and the market moved moderately higher, but no decisive movement developed.

Neither was there any dramatic activity in the bond market, which is also being buffeted by numerous economic uncertainties at the moment.

Bond interest rates, which had tended upward through most of August, made a stab at backing down a bit just before Labor Day. Last week, though, it became clear that there was little real force behind the downward thrust.

In the corporate bond market, the New York Telephone Company sold $75-million of triple-A bonds at competitive bidding, and the winning underwriting group reoffered them publicly at a price to yield 5.95 per cent. This compared with a yield of a flat 6 per cent in the preceding Bell issue sold in mid-August.

Without the attractiveness of the 6 per cent yield, however, the New York Telephone bonds failed to sell quickly.

Meanwhile, in the municipal bond market, Pennsylvania sold $75-million of bonds to finance highways and bridges last Thursday. This issue, regarded as the best gauge of the tax-exempt bond market last week, was priced to give investors tax-free yields 20 basis points (two-tenths of 1 per cent) higher than similar issues marketed two weeks earlier, and it sold quickly.

More than anything else, the recent nervousness in the bond market reflects concern over the fate of the tax-increase proposal now before Congress and the strength of inflationary forces currently at work in the economy.

Basically, however, there is much more bullishness than bearishness on the state of the economy in the current forecasts of Government officials and private economists.

Their main area of concern is that Congress, now that an auto strike has materialized, will drag its feet in enacting the 10 per cent tax suggested to reduce the ballooning Federal inflationary pressures in the economy.

assured, it may be followed by strikes at the other companies and, eventually, a settlement around the 6 per cent level.

If this proves to be the course of the auto dispute, it could impose severe new strains on the economy—not only in raising the pattern of wage settlements but also in the production and inventory areas. And it might unsettle the stock market.

Economist Eliot Janeway, for one, thinks "a market break is in the cards later on this year or early next year," but he is hardly in a majority.

Despite the upward movement of volume and prices last week, it was obvious that numerous economic uncertainties were holding a rein on the stock market.

It was nevertheless a generally higher market, with 813 issues scoring gains for the week and 643 posting losses. All the major averages rose slightly.

The Dow-Jones industrial index tacked on a new gain of 6.36 points to the 7-11-point advance of the preceding week and closed at 907.54.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange improved perceptibly, averaging nine million shares for the week's four sessions, compared with 7.2 million the week before.

Any new flame who passes out milk stoles doesn't have to be good looking. But Mom's is. Mom's new flame is her handsome, compact Gas furnace. Every time she thinks about it she feels warm all over. But about that milk. Gas heat saves Dad up to several hundred dollars every winter, thousands of dollars over the life of the mortgage. And that's enough for a milk stole or two, or a new car, or a college education in anybody's bank book. Maybe you could use a new flame, too—a modern, dependable Gas flame. Think of all the things you can do with the money you save with Gas.

Elk Township Holds Annual Homecoming

The annual Elk Township Homecoming was held recently at the Covenant Church. Dr. Fenner Lindbloom presided at the program and Rev. Herman Davidson, pastor of the Scandia Church, gave the invocation. The special feature of the day was the presentation of the Elk Township history by Miss Ethel Young. She told who the first settlers were, where they came from and where they lived. Many of those attending the program, as well as herself, were descendants of those she told about. She also told about the many early schools, churches and the Grange.

Roll call that was taken showed five states were represented by earlier residents, their families and friends. Mrs. Anna Eckman, 94, who came to Scandia as a small child from Sweden, now lives in Jamestown. Master Robert Cupp was the youngest present. Mrs. Eckman was the oldest guest. Annual reports were presented by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Joseph Rodgers.

Directors elected to serve three year terms were: Mr. John Nordin, Mr. Kenneth Jespersen, Mr. Sidney Johnson, and Mr. David Raegle. Others remaining on the board of directors are: Mrs. Lathair Swanson, Mrs. Joseph Rodgers, Mr. Richard Campbell, Mr. Donald Hagberg, Mr. Harry Nasman, Mr. Ernest Lindell, Mrs. Edward Flick, Mrs. Ernest Sandin, also Dr. Fenner Lindbloom, chairman of the Scandia Covenant Church, and Mrs. Ray Wall, president of the ladies aid.

The traditional "Happy Days of Childhood" was sung at the close of the program in Swedish. A chicken barbecue was served to the 275 persons in the church basement. Approximately seventy-five, young and old, participated in the sports events planned by Mr. Richard Campbell, Mr. William VanCise, and Mr. Fred Merdinhall. Prizes for the events were donated by local businesses.

Fifty horses participated in the horse show. Chairmen for this event were Dr. Fenner Lindbloom and Mr. Kenneth Jespersen. Announcer—Mr. Charles Carlson; ring master—Mr. Fred Lindell; judges—Mr. Victor Lauffenburger and Mr. Elliott Jespersen. In charge of registration were Mrs. Carlson and Mrs. Fred Lindell. The special event of the horse show was the Ernest Lindell award which was won by Miss Brenda Phillips of Russell.
